The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

BUY DOWN NOW... SAVE OIL

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We Go The Distance For You"

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

How far does Dan's Papers travel? To the Phillipines so far this year.

The Twilight Zone

The Town Exactly On The Other Side Of The Planet Is Just Like This One

By Dan Rattiner

Every year, Dan's Papers runs a contest called "How Far Does Dan's Papers Travel?" Readers are urged to take a dateline from the paper with them to the farthest point in the world and mail it back to us. The one with the farthest away postmark wins $50. The prize is awarded every September.

What is the place that provides the farthest away postmark? Well, long ago we determined, by digging a hole very far down behind our offices in Bridgehampton, that the town on the exact opposite end of this planet from Bridgehampton was Augusta, West Australia. We wrote about this fact in the advertising that went with this contest. We urged people to go to that very place. But for years and years the winners came from very near by Augusta, including Perth, Adelaide, the Great Barrier Reef, Sydney, and once even from a man in Antarctica who had a copy of the paper parachuted down to him as part of a supply drop at the South Pole, but never from Augusta. And then, finally, about ten years into the contest, somebody with a Dan's Papers went to visit that place. What they found was extraordinary.

They said that Augusta is incredibly like the Hamptons, specifically Montauk. It is like something from the Twilight Zone and, on some days I imagine it IS Montauk, just backwards, with the sun setting in the east and the clocks ticking counterclockwise.

Here is the amazing comparison between Augusta, West Australia, and Montauk.

Both towns are beach resorts, about 100 miles from the nearest major urban center. In Montauk's case, this is Manhattan. In Augusta's case, this is Perth.

Both towns have a lighthouse — the Montauk Lighthouse in Montauk, and the Cape Leeuwin Lighthouse and Augusta. Both lighthouses are state parks and administered by town historical societies, and are open to the public. And at both lighthouses you can climb up to the top.

There are about 20 wineries on the peninsula at the end of which Augusta sits. There are about 20 wineries on the peninsula at the end of which Montauk sits.

Both Augusta and Montauk have accommodations for tourists including motels, hotels, bed and breakfasts and inns. Both have annual surfing competitions. Both have fine beaches. Both have fishing villages with docks and fishing boats. You can take a ferry cruise from Augusta up the Blackwood River. You can take a ferry cruise from Montauk to Block Island.

Best windsurfing in western Australia is at Jay's Beach in Augusta. Best windsurfing on eastern Long Island is in Napeague Harbor, on the outskirts of Montauk.

Adrian Block, a Dutchman, sailed past Montauk in 1613 after becoming the first European to circumnavigate Long Island. Matthew Flinders, an Englishman, sailed by Augusta in 1802 on his way to becoming the first European to circumnavigate Australia.

The first settler in Montauk was Lion Gardiner, an Englishman who came there to meet the local natives — he called them Indians — and to claim land in 1639. The first settler in Augusta was James Stirling, also an Englishman, who went there to meet the natives — he called them Aborigines — and to claim land in 1830.

James Stirling's boat from England in 1830 was a barque called Warrior. Lion Gardiner's boat from England in 1635 was the Bachelor.

Augusta offers many organized activities, such as trail walking for backpackers who come to that town. They call that activity Going Walkabout and they call the backpackers bushwalkers. Montauk offers many organized activities, such as trail walking, for backpackers who come to that town. They call it hiking and they call the backpackers campers.

Bicycle riding is encouraged in both towns, and both Augusta and Montauk are frequent destinations for bicycle club trips.

There is an establishment for RVs and trailers in Augusta and it is called the Augusta Motor Home Park. There is an establishment for RVs and trailers in Montauk and it is called the Ditch Plains Trailer Park.

Augusta has a visitors bureau that keeps track of hotel and motel vacancies. Montauk has a chamber of commerce that keeps track of hotel and motel vacancies.

Montauk gets most of its visitors in the summertime, which is June through September. August gets most of its visitors in the summertime, which is December through March.

There is no canoeing or kayaking in Montauk, but you can do both on Georgica Pond, sixteen miles away. There is no canoeing or kayaking in Augusta, but there is that activity east of town at a landing on the Blackwood River, eleven miles away.

OH, I DON'T THINK SO.
WE HAVEN'T HAD MUCH TO WORK WITH.

Montaukers get to watch the sun rise over the ocean every day of the year. Augustans get to watch the sun set over the ocean every day of the year.

The farther away you go on this planet, the more you find out when you get there that it stays the same.

Well, maybe not completely the same. Montauk and the rest of the Hamptons have one thing that Augusta has not got. It has celebrities, specifically Paul Simon, Edward Albee, the Rolling Stones (sometimes), George Plimpton, Alec Baldwin, Jerry Seinfeld, Billy Joel, Peter Jennings and Sean "P. Diddy" Combs. Augusta has kangaroos, all of which are named Skippy.

There are many differences between kangaroos and celebrities. In fact, there are almost as many differences as there are similarities between Montauk and Augusta.

Celebrities are, on average, about a foot taller than kangaroos.

Kangaroos hop higher than celebrities and can run farther and faster.

Kangaroos — most of them — smell funky. Celebrities would smell funky, too, but they bathe a lot, so they smell of cologne and aftershave.

Kangaroos mate for life. Celebrities have a wide range of mating practices.

Kangaroos are smarter than celebrities, but they just don't let on.

Kangaroos have little short arms and hands with ten fingers, big ears, whiskers, giant legs and four-foot long tails they balance themselves on. Celebrities have big arms, little ears, square jaws and cute noses. And they have their tails bobbed at birth.

Kangaroos are shy. Celebrities seek the spotlight.

Some celebrities, if asked, will pretend to be somebody else and then want to get paid or be given a trophy. Kangaroos rarely say anything at all, don't care about trophies, but on the other hand, will hang around and beg for food.

Celebrities have bodyguards, masseuses, a staff and various advisors and coaches. Kangaroos just hop around.

In Augusta, kangaroos are in great abundance and often get hit by cars or killed by hunters. In Montauk, celebrities are rarely sighted but, when seen, provide an unexplainable thrill for those that see them. Few celebrities get hit by cars.

Celebrities never name their kids Joey. Kangaroos always name their kids Joey.

Celebrities tend to be Democrats. Kangaroos are almost always moderate Republicans who favor gun control.

Celebrities have assistants and agents to handle their affairs. Kangaroos take their own calls.

Celebrities are out front. Kangaroos are out back.

It appears from the above that Montauk and Augusta are exact mirror images of one another. Due to a quirk of evolution, however, Montauk wound up with celebrities rather than kangaroos.

Perhaps it is not too late to correct this situation. •

A Car On Shelter Island For That Faraway Land Of Long Ago

By Dan Rattiner

If you want to know what this country was like a half a century ago, go to Shelter Island. It's a quiet, peaceful place with winding back roads, several hundred Victorian summer homes, a few horse farms and marinas, and two downtown areas with maybe fifteen stores each. There are lots of trails through woods, several curved bay beaches, some golf courses and ponds. At the Coecles Harbor Boatyard, workmen manufacture high-powered "Shelter Island Runabouts" designed by Billy Joel and architect Doug Zurn. If you have a quarter million dollars or so, you can buy one. Maybe Billy will even take you for a test drive.

The truly wonderful thing about the island, however, is how quiet and restful it is. You hear the sound of birds, the rush of the wind, the soft lapping of the surf. You can go for long walks on Shelter Island right on the side of the road. The reason, of course, is there are almost no cars on the island, and so, there is no traffic hum to drown things out. It is an extraordinary thing. It's like fifty years ago. The cars that do get to the island come by either the North or South Ferry, docked in Greenport or Sag Harbor, respectively. And the ferries can only take ten cars or so at a time.

Just how seductive all this can be was brought forcefully home to me a couple of years ago when we had an early dinner at the Ram's Head Inn on the island. The manager came over and, watching the sun set, we got to talking. He owns the House on Chase Creek, which is a bed and breakfast in Shelter Island Heights. You ought to come over and check it out, he said. On our way into the inn, I had noticed an old American convertible, top down, sitting in the parking lot with a For Sale sign in the window. I asked him about it.

"I'm selling that car," he said. "It's a 1963 Buick. Not terrific condition but it runs. Looking for a thousand dollars for it."

With dinner over and dusk settling over the island, we went out to have a better look. It was wide, low, and long, with tail fins. White and chrome. Some rust. A dent. He walked over with the key.

"Want to take it for a test drive?"

It was wonderful. The wind blew in your hair. There was the sound of crickets. Leaves from the low branches on the windy road I took it along were so close you could almost pick them. I bought it.

The next day, I came back with the plates. We put them on. Drove it down to the ferry — such an exhilarating feeling — and went onboard. It was half-again bigger than any other car. It was terrific.

In Sag Harbor, just five minutes off the ferry, it was a disaster. I was in the middle of a traffic jam. There were people on cell phones, big trucks carrying fuel oil and cement, SUVs from which people could look down into the old Buick. I inched forward. It was hot and sticky and I was going nowhere. I thought maybe someone would take this thing off my hands for $800. In the end, I got $500. I had been seduced by Shelter Island. And I thought, as I waved the new owner goodbye, that if he was smart he'd take it back to Shelter Island and put it up again for $1000. You could sell it all day for $1000 over there.

All this is by way of introducing you to the fact that there may be a new and wonderful little electric car debuting on Shelter Island this summer. It is about eight feet long, four and a half feet wide and five feet high. It runs on electricity and at the end of the day you plug it into the wall and it recharges. It is made by Global Electric Motors (GEM), a leading manufacturer of NEVs (Neighborhood Electric Vehicles), which is a subsidiary of Daimler Chrysler. It is a serious entry into the transportation business, taking people silently, and cutely, from one place to another, four at a time.

A man named Barry Carr came to a Shelter Island Town Board meeting two weeks ago, wondering if people on the island would like it if Daimler Chrysler were to LOAN them a bunch to use for a week or two.

What's the catch? some people wanted to know.

Turns out, there wasn't any catch. Daimler Chrysler is looking for places to give these things out to sort of jumpstart, if you'll forgive the pun, a sales effort to sell them. They plan to loan out 250 of them all together in the Northeast, and somebody suggested Shelter Island.

What could possibly be better than this for Shelter Island? 38 states in the Union, New York among them, have passed laws making it legal to own and drive what is called a "low speed/NEV" vehicle on roads throughout the state. You buy one, register it, agree to follow some rules, and your driver's license is all you need.

The law says this new classification vehicle must be able to travel up to 25 miles an hour, be used on roads where the speed limit is 35 miles an hour or less (though you can cross roads with higher speed limits), have a windshield and windshield wipers, seatbelts, turn signals, lights, flashers, heaters and defrosters and that's about it.

This first entry by Daimler Chrysler meets all these requirements, will go up to 35 miles without a recharge, and comes in yellow, red, blue and white. It has a roof and a rear window, but no doors, though you can buy them as an option. They are made of vinyl. It has a gauge on the windshield that tells you how much charge is left and another gauge that tells you how many miles you've traveled, and a glove box that locks for valuables. No radio, no GPS, no air conditioning. (Well, yes, air conditioning. The air blows in and out.)

You can also buy for it a large sack that hooks onto the back for carrying things. And you can name it. Really, because it has no name. I thought it might be called an Elf or a Sprite or something, but they just call it GEM. A lousy name. You might name one Bugeye, since, from the front, it looks a bit like a giant crab or bug — it does to me, anyway.

At the present time, there is no dealer for these things on the East End, although the Eagle Auto Mall will introduce them in Riverhead in about a month for around $7,000, less some tax credits that are offered by the government. Until then, there is a guy in Water Mill, Mike DeRosa, who runs Eastland Nursery on the Montauk Highway, who is acting as an assistant dealer for a dealership upstate in Amenia. (They make these things in Fargo, North Dakota.) DeRosa has ten of them so you can go see them. I spoke to him on the phone.

"I've sold three of them so far," he said. "I make a few bucks on it, but really it is just for the fun of it. It's a really neat thing, not to take the place of your car of course, but to get you up into town, say Bridgehampton, using the back roads, to do a little shopping, and then back home. They did make an offer for some of them to go to Shelter Island residents, but you'd have to talk to them about that. I think Daimler Chrysler is also giving a few away to LIPA. Maybe they want to get the U.S. Post Office interested. There are lots of ideas."

Though Shelter Island looks like a home run, since most people drive only 25 miles an hour anyway — there's nobody behind them, the roads are curvy and there's lots of pretty stuff to look at — I did ask DeRosa about the Hamptons.

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS
THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.

2 PM Saturday, April 26 – GARBO TALKS – Sidney Lumet directs other Hamptonites in a charming and poignant story. A dutiful son, Ron Silver goes about fulfilling his mother's wish to meet Greta Garbo. Ann Bancroft, as the tough mom, is a trip. The meeting in the closing scene features the fab Betty Comden, as Garbo. Darn, we gave away the ending.

2 PM Saturday, May 3 – A SHOCK TO THE SYSTEM – Michael Caine stars, yet again, in "Movies Made Here"; as in so many others he's a bit naughty. Here he realizes how easy it is to get ahead in the ad business...kill off people in your way. A shady dark comedy of the greedy 80's and 90's, it puts Elizabeth McGovern and Swoosie Kurtz in harm's way with giggles.

2 PM Saturday, May 10 – THE WOODY ALLEN PROJECT – A musical jaunt in Europe and back home to visit his mom and dad here on the Island. Pop thought Wood should have been a druggist. His wife, Soon Yi, has to put up with Woody's kvetching on tour and thinks maybe daddy knew best. The music put out by Woody's band is so toe-tapping happy, you'd never know he's such a sourpuss.

Hosted by Guy De Fraumeni, Hollywood Film Critic and Oscar and Film Festival Movie Judge. Assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Filmmaker Highlights A Problem. Here's How We Deal With It

By Dan Rattiner

We are coming up on the one year anniversary of the ABC documentary "The Hamptons," created by award-winning documentarian Barbara Kopple. Much anticipated at the time, the single most lingering scene is that of Josh Sagman, the 25-year-old New York City resident sitting on a railing overlooking the hot tub at his Hampton Bays group rental shouting "Party! Party! Party!" The words reverberate through the ages.

Barbara, who, good as she is, will probably never set foot in the Hamptons again without being tarred and feathered and sent out of town on a rail, nevertheless struck a nerve, inaccurate as her documentary is, that has called our local officials to action. They have proceeded on four fronts to end the possibility that this community will descend into a party town, a community where the litter is empty beer cans, the downtowns are filled with people screaming Party! Party! Party! late into the night and where, to put it gently, morality does not reign. Other communities in America have come face to face with the same situation and have dealt with it. For bringing it to our attention — even in such an exaggerated manner — we say, Thank You Barbara.

The first thing that happened, last fall, was the announcement by the Southampton Town Supervisor, Patrick Heaney, that the existence of this summer's group rental houses would be monitored. It is easy to do. Shares in group houses — where fifteen or twenty people crash in a private home — are advertised on known Internet sites and in known newspaper classifieds. Advertising them is not illegal. But there is nothing to prevent the town police from making note of them and noting their location. There are laws against having more than a certain number of people in a home in a residential area. There are noise ordinances. There are laws against the number of cars that can be parked in a driveway.

> They have proceeded... to end the possibility that this community will descend into a town... with people screaming Party! Party! Party!

Later in the fall, the town beefed up the penalties to be levied for violating these ordinances. The idea is to make it too expensive to be worthwhile. Fines will be charged on a per-day basis. We are a family community. No one wants these activities in a residential area anywhere.

Sometime in January of this year, the town arranged to purchase the Conscience Point Inn, scene of one of the most awful incidents among the party hearty set. A public relations woman, Lizzie Grubman, after allegedly cursing at some parking attendants who urged she and her daddy's Mercedes Benz SUV to move along at the nightly party there during the summer of 2001, put the vehicle in reverse, peeled out

SUPPORT OUR SOLDIERS THIS SATURDAY

Late this Saturday afternoon, an important gathering will take place at the Star Room in Wainscott, which we hope everyone will attend. It is called the Dan's Papers SOS Support Our Soldiers Event and all of us Americans, all of us civilians, parents, brothers and sisters of our soldiers fighting in Iraq, are invited to come, spend an hour or two there, and join with us in a salute to those who are fighting for us so far away.

"These kids are making their nation very proud... Many of them will go off in the dirt and the dark these coming days... some won't come back... I guess they think the USA is worth it," Brigadeer General Vincent E. Boles, said two weeks ago from his post in Iraq. He is the brother of Kevin Boles, Sante Fe Restaurant, East Hampton, and he is there, along with a quarter of a million other soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines, because our Commander in Chief called upon them to be there to rid this world of a ruthless tyrant.

"Our goals are fourfold," the President said. "We want to disarm him and rid Iraq of a terrible regime, we want to bring peace to that part of the world, we want to make our country safe from his threats and his actions, and we want to head the Iraqi people down a new road toward democracy and freedom."

This has been and continues to be a hard and dangerous job. We can, because we live in America, debate from today until tomorrow about whether the President should have called upon the men and women of this country to do that job sooner or later or not at all, but the decision has been made and now we support our President and we must let our troops know that we are behind them in this endeavor.

Leave your politics at the door. Reach in your pocket and produce the one thing that you will need to gain admission to this event: a letter to one of our soldiers. If you do not know someone serving in Kuwait or Iraq it does not matter. Write the letter simply to "One of our troops serving overseas." We have set up connections and we will arrange, in a very short amount of time, to deliver your letter to a service person there.

The Dan's Papers SOS event will take place from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Saturday night April 12 at the Star Room in Wainscott. There are so many people we would like to thank, who have donated their talents, time and gifts to this event and we would like to thank them in advance. And as I write this, the list grows.

Thanks to Dan Wassong of Del Labs and Sally Hanson cosmetics to Scott Gray and Scott Storbo of the Star Room to Long Island Sound, Park Avenue Mortgages, to Dewars Scotch Whiskey, to Cynthia Sestito, to Paul Sydney of WLNG, to Linda Shapiro, Gurney's Inn, Golden Pear, American Bistro, Mardi Gras, Saracen, Blue duck Bakery, Bobby Van's, Schmidt's and Blue Parrot.

We have already received our first letter to be delivered to a soldier. Here it is.

Dear Soldiers:

In the Hamptons of Long Island, our townspeople wanted to show you our support.

Two kind souls, Dan Rattiner (Publisher of the Hamptons' favorite newspaper) and an event planner named Linda Shapiro, organized a gathering in your honor called, SOS, short for Support Our Soldiers. They said the price of admission to this rally is simply a letter, which would be sent to you.

I felt this was a good idea and, inspired by Sesame Street, I want to send you the letter "L."

This is a giant letter "L," as tall as the Twin Towers, and it won't fit in an envelope. So I'll have to tell you what it stands for.

Actually, this giant letter "L" stands what you are all about. It stands for:

Life: the one you are willing to lay down for us, so that we may live in freedom.

Your "L" also stands for:

Loyalty: So strong toward our nation, you guard us from evil 24/7. So faithful toward your comrades, you will never leave them on the field of battle.

Your "L" stands for:

Leadership: By putting America first in your life, you have made America first among nations. May she always prove worthy of your valor and sacrifice, and always be a force for good.

Your "L" stands for:

Poxy Plan

Town Is Offered An Imaginative Plan To Save The Poxabogue Golf Course

By Dan Rattiner

A group of businessmen, wishing to save the Poxabogue Golf Center, have a plan to save the place from the bulldozer forever without it costing Southampton Town a penny. Most of the men play golf at Poxabogue. They want to save it for themselves as well for the rest of the townspeople to play, keeping it as it is.

The plan, mostly involving tax breaks, charitable deductions and perpetual easements, was shown to this editor last Thursday. No mini-golf course would be built. No new lighting would go in. It seems like a fine idea.

As things stand now, this nine-hole public golf course in Sagaponack on the Montauk Highway across from Town Line Road will make way for an 18-home residential housing development. The development received its final approval last week and the present owners are free to move ahead with it. The course itself, an institution in the community as the only public golf course between Riverhead and Amagansett, has reopened about this time for each of the last forty years. Now it awaits the bulldozer.

The businessmen have approached the current owners of the golf course and, after talking to them, believe the property can be purchased for between $6 and $7 million, let's call it $6.5 million for the sake of discussion. In spite of all efforts to get the town to seriously negotiate with the present owners, the town, after six months of meetings, has yet to make an offer, according to the owners. Though it seems like the town might be persuaded to pay $5 million for the property, $5 million would likely be rejected. The owners would make more with the housing development.

Here is what the businessmen have put together. They would form a partnership, which would include themselves and the Township of Southampton, and this partnership would pay the developers the full $6.5 million. The partnership would also provide whatever monies would be necessary to get the course ready for this summer. Where would the money come from? $5 million of it would be given to this partnership as a loan by the town, to be paid back to the town over the next ten years, with interest, by the partnership from the operating profits of the course. The course, in its last year, took in $1.1 million and netted $300,000. With a little tweaking, it could serve to pay back the loan. It would not be necessary for the course to be developed any further than what it currently is for the partnership to do this.

Where would the remaining $1.5 million come from? The businessmen would put it up. Many of the businessmen involved in this are well-to-do people whose income is taxed in the 50% bracket. One year after the purchase of this property, the partnership would donate in perpetuity all buildings on the property and the development rights to the property to the town. It is believed that this gift of easement rights of about 40 acres, which is the size of the course, plus the existing buildings, would be worth about $3.5 million at appraisal. 50% of that money, or $1.75 million, could be used by the businessmen as a charitable deduction on their income taxes, thus saving them that amount of money. Thus they would receive back, as money saved, the $1.75 million a year earlier to purchase the course and get it going.

The new situation, if this were to go ahead, would have this result.

1. The course would be saved, in perpetuity.

2. The town would lend out $5 million, which would be paid back to it over ten years, with interest — resulting in a net cost to it of zero.

3. There would be no new putting surface, the part of an earlier plan that seemed to cause much controversy.

4. There would be no 18-home development.

5. The town, now owning the buildings and the development rights, would have complete control over these in the future. The property would, of course, by perpetual easement, remain a golf course.

There is a certain symmetry to this plan in that the businessmen would still wind up out the equivalent of 50% of their income, but instead of paying it all to Uncle Sam, they would pay part to Uncle Sam and part to save the golf course. In other words, the federal government would provide the funds to make this possible, something that seems very fair since the course would remain a public course and available to the general public who pay the taxes.

There is ample precedent for this sort of thing, from the federal government providing much of the funding for various state and town programs, to the federal government allowing charitable deductions for donations to museums and other facilities.

Harold Levine, who is a Manhattan tax attorney with a house in East Hampton, and who has annually played Poxabogue about 30 times a year every year for the last decade, has put this plan together and says he has done it before with other situations similar to this and that it passes muster with the IRS. He has a group of businessmen willing to participate in this who could make it happen within two weeks.

Time is of the essence. The town needs to be involved for it to happen, obviously, and if this summer's season of golf is to be saved, they need to call him and speak to him before April is out. Levine can be reached at 212-592-1464 and will make himself available to Town Supervisor Heaney at the latter's convenience.

After writing the above article I spoke to Supervisor Heaney who said he was intrigued by this idea, but thought it made sense to do it with the present owners directly. He said he would contact Mr. Levine, but to this date he has not. •

"I see it for somebody in the estate section who wants to go to the club, or the beach, or shopping in town. Sort of half a second car.

"Many people drive on roads with 35-mile an hour speed limits at 40 miles an hour. They might get antsy following something at 25 miles an hour.

"You pull over," he said. "Like a tractor. Though this is very narrow. You see cars coming up behind you in the mirror."

"Hmmmm. What if you live on a road where the speed limit is 45 miles an hour or more?" I asked.

"You'd have to get to a cross street that's 35 miles an hour. It's sort of a back road thing."

"How do you get there if at the bottom of your driveway the road speed is 45 or 50."

"You'd have to ask a policeman about that. But I'm sure there's a way to work it out. Maybe ride on the shoulder to get to a back road."

I asked how you lock it up.

"You don't," he said. "It has an ignition key, a lock box key. I guess you could use a bike lock. But nobody is going to take it. Anyway, you can get insurance for that."

Sounded like a Shelter Island vehicle to me. With a few exceptions.

There have been lots of different vehicles that have been marketed in places like the Hamptons where the traffic whizzes by on the Montauk Highway at 55 that haven't worked particularly well. Mopeds are not in abundance. You see motorcycles and motor scooters, and they are fine for one person or for a second holding onto the first, and they require a bit of skill. For awhile you saw chrome, fold-up kids' motor scooters. And two years ago, they said that the Segway was going to revolutionize the way we get around. But I haven't seen one. Have you?

On Shelter Island, it could be so successful that it becomes a signature vehicle for that place. They could rent them out at the North and South Ferries for people who cross on the ferries on foot. You'd drive around, the wind in your hair, the birds chirping away, your little Global Electric Motorcar making a tiny hum. I'm told that several dozen people on the island have already spoken to Bob Drake and said they'd be delighted to try out a free Global Electric Motorcar if it were offered. Drake lives on the island and is handling the arrangements with Daimler Chrysler on behalf of the town.

As for the rest of the East End, it will be seen as a sort of a glorified golf cart, for people who like their creature comforts, but who don't want to consume gasoline if they don't have to. It could also be seen as a cheap alternative to buying a Cooper Mini, a full-scale automobile that is half again bigger than the Global Electric Motorcar but which winds out on the expressway at around 80 miles an hour. •

Galileo, Dava Sobel and Maria Celeste

Galileo

East Hampton Author Dava Sobel Talks About Her Work At Library

By Rachel May

Dava Sobel, author of Longitude and Galileo's Daughter, spoke at the Riverhead Free Library on Saturday, marking the first in a series of lectures funded by the community's Memorial Gifts. The room was packed, and Ms. Sobel, an East Hampton resident, kept the crowd entertained with the tale of how her book, and her career, came into being. The event was billed as a conversation, so the audience had free rein to ask questions.

Galileo's Daughter tells the story of a father and daughter's relationship through the letters Maria Celeste (nee Virginia) wrote to Galileo between 1823 and 1833. Though the correspondence covers only ten years, the book fills in the gaps with the history of Galileo's scientific discoveries so that the whole of his work and its impact are interwoven with his relationship with his daughter. The scientist also had another daughter and a son, but his relationship with Maria Celeste was unique. They shared similar interests and sensibilities, and the respect and tenderness between them is evident in Maria's writing.

Dava Sobel said that she was inspired to research this project when she stumbled across one of Maria Celeste's letters in a book. Ms. Sobel had never known that Galileo had a daughter, and what was even more surprising was that Maria Celeste was a nun. She was fascinated by the idea that this man who purportedly hated religion had raised two daughters who grew up to dedicate their lives to the church, and she though that researching his relationship with Maria Celeste might shed some light on how he reconciled his discoveries with his Catholic beliefs.

She dedicated the book to the fathers, hers and Maria Celeste's, because she said she "felt as if the book was half hers and half Maria Celeste's."

Interestingly, the author said that part of what inspired her to write this book was her relationship with her own father, who was a scientist of a different sort: a physician. About a year into her research, she suddenly remembered going through her father's things after he'd died and finding a letter she'd written to him many years earlier, showing that "fathers cherish the letters their daughters write to them." She said that her father was directly responsible for her finding the relationship between Maria Celeste and Galileo so captivating, and she dedicated the book to the fathers, hers and Maria Celeste's, because she said she "felt as if the book was half hers and half Maria Celeste's."

Ms. Sobel grew up in what she described as a scientific household and was influenced by both parents in that regard. Her mother was a chemist who chose to stay home with her children. When her father learned to sail, her mother took a course in celestial navigation. She never felt as though science was "something a girl couldn't do." She attended the Bronx High School of Science and followed her own path to science writing. After attending three different colleges and changing majors five times, she graduated, and then went back to school because she didn't know what she wanted to do. She was hired as a writer for a newspaper and says that within a week, she knew it was what she was meant to do. As the women's section writer, she was able to choose her own topics, which were, of course, all science related. When the Ithaca New Times asked her to do a profile of Carl Sagan, she impressed him by sending the copy to him the evening after she interviewed him so that he could check for inaccuracies. She calls the salary for the profile "the best five dollars I ever earned." A friendship was born between the two, and Mr. Sagan helped her to land her next job at Cornell as a science writer. She defends his reputation and calls him a hero of hers. "He was a tremendous light and there's no one around now to do what he did," she said, adding that he was a generous man who was misunderstood by his colleagues.

What I loved about hearing Dava Sobel speak is her passion for her work, which is obvious in her writing as well. She seems to have the mind of a scientist and the soul of a novelist. She is attached to the people about whom she writes, her prose is beautiful, and she creates a story out of these two lives. And yet, the book is filled with science and history, subjects that turn dry in some writer's hands but in Sobel's become compelling fact and discovery woven into the web of the father-daughter relationship. When speaking, Ms. Sobel describes her subjects as near-friends to whom she is attached. "I felt a bond with this woman which I could not explain," she said. "I was convinced I knew what her voice sounded like and I wasn't going to turn [the project] over to someone else." In order to research the letters, Ms. Sobel revived the Italian she'd learned in college by taking a class and then throwing herself into Maria Celeste's work, looking up words as she went along (many at first, and then fewer as she grew more comfortable). Although she said her Italian was below par when she began her research, she quickly improved. "Wanting to do something very badly is the best credential for doing it because you don't mind the sweat and the long hours," shesaid.

This project, which began as a magazine article that suffered many rejections before its acceptance to the Harvard magazine, put Ms. Sobel deep into debt. She traveled to Italy several times to complete the research and stayed dedicated to the project despite other people's lack of interest. She said that her son asked her if she really thought that anyone was going to read this story, and she answered, "No, but I will be proud of it, and we can say we did a good job and that will be worth it." The article and the book were completed only because of her passion and drive to see it to its finish. Like the subjects, she didn't let modern opinion stop her, and the payoffs have been great. Ms. Sobel says that what was most rewarding about writing Galileo's Daughter was being able to meet so many generous people. While in Italy, she met the sisters in Maria Celeste's order, the Poor Clare nuns. After finishing Galileo's Daughter, she decided to compile all remaining 124 letters and publish them both in Italian (which was not previously available in the U.S.) and English, and to donate all the proceeds to the order. She has been able to give them over $20,000 so far and says that when she visited, she was overcome with emotion. And of course, there is the more obvious pay-off: Galileo's Daughter is a New York Times bestseller and has found a new audience beyond science lovers. It makes accessible and interesting to the general public a topic that once appealed to only a small demographic. Dava Sobel is currently working on a new book, this one about the planets. •

After 3 Years In A Caribbean Prison For A Crime He Didn't Commit, Southampton's William Labrador Is Coming Home

By Joshua May

After more than three years in prison on the British Virgin Island of Tortola, William Labrador was freed by an English court on Monday evening. Citing the unreliable testimony of prison informant Jeffery Plante, the court quashed Labrador's conviction for drowning Lois McMillen and barred any retrial on the grounds that it would not be in the interest of justice.

Labrador's mother, Barbara, a Southampton resident, was jubilant when the news reached her. "He's coming home! He's coming home!" she exclaimed to Courttv.com. William Labrador had been in jail since the January 15, 2000, murder of Lois McMillen and he was more than relieved when the ruling was handed down.

"It's time to go live my life again, which thank God was not taken from me," he told the Associated Press.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which is the highest court of appeals for trials in British territories, ruled definitively that the conviction was based exclusively on the testimony of Jeffery Plante, a known liar and con man. Plante was the only witness who provided direct evidence in the 15-day trial in 2001, a supposed confession made while he and Labrador shared a cell in the Tortola prison. Plante said that Labrador has confessed to drowning McMillan when a fight over money got out of hand. Plante was being held at the time for writing bad checks. He violated his probation in Texas to go to Tortola and following Labrador's trial he was returned to Texas to finish serving 30 years of a 45-year sentence.

"It would be hard to imagine a witness who was less deserving of belief than Jeffery Plante," the judges wrote in their decision. The judges did not mince words in their judgment of Plante and on Tuesday the chief judge hearing the trial called Plante a "habitual liar." Another judge wrote in the decision that, "His evidence is so lacking in credibility as to make it impossible to regard any conviction on his evidence alone as safe." The decision went further, saying that the trial judge had failed to properly inform the nine-member jury of Plante's background and the motives that would have led him to testify against Labrador.

Labrador's English lawyer, Edward Fitzgerald, was equally skeptical of the Tortola judge's performance and very critical of the prosecution's handling of the case. The prosecutor, Theodore Guerra, suggested at one point that a probation officer, who testified about Plante, had manufactured a 1995 trial transcript in which Plante had said another cellmate of his had confessed to a murder. The general sentiment was that this trial had been a rush to judgment that was constructed upon the fictional confession that Plante created to meet his own ends.

Labrador and three friends who had been vacationing with him on Tortola, Evan George, Alexander Benedetto and Michael Spicer, were arrested after the body of Lois McMillen, an attractive 34-year-old whose family had a house in Tortola, was found in January, 2000. McMillen had gone to see a band at the Jolly Roger Inn and never returned home. That same night, the four friends stopped at an ATM near the Jolly Roger and then Labrador returned home to watch TV while the three others went to a bar.

> Labrador's mother, Barbara, a Southampton resident, was jubilant when the news reached her. "He's coming home! He's coming home!" she exclaimed...

The next morning McMillen's body was found and the four friends were brought in for questioning and held because the police claimed their shoes were wet and sandy. (During the trial the police testified that the shoes had not, in fact, been wet.) Labrador also had a cut on his nose that was later revealed to be a sun blister. Labrador's friends were later released during the trial for a lack of evidence and he was convicted and sentenced to life in prison based on Plante's testimony.

Benedetto was later charged in the crime again and he failed to return to Tortola to face prosecution a second time. The Privy council also ruled that he could no longer face prosecution for the crime.

"I am very pleased after almost three and a half years justice has finally been served for us, but it hasn't been served for Lois," Benedetto said. "We still don't know who killed her."

And based on the way in which the case was handled by the police and prosecutors, the perpetrator may never be found. Reading the 38-page decision by the Privy Council, the miscarriage of justice in what is generally regarded as a nice place to vacation is utterly astonishing.

DNA traces from the crime scene didn't match any of the four friends. Semen was found on a tampon of hers that didn't match any of them. Articles of clothing and bloodstained napkins proved no link. As stated in the decision, "There was no physical or scientific evidence which linked any of the four men to [McMillen's] car or the deceased body or to the place where they were found."

Labrador was convicted solely on the testimony of Plante, and Plante knew no details specific to the crime that he couldn't have read in the newspaper. In fact, the "confession" recounted actions that didn't match up with the physical evidence. Plante said that Labrador told him he had put his foot on the back of McMillen's neck and the bruises on her neck were in the front. The prosecutor chose to ignore this evidence. The nine-member jury returned a conviction the same afternoon that the closing arguments were heard.

The extreme perversion of justice in this case is staggering. An innocent man gave three years of his life because of gross incompetence and even willful malice on the part of the police and prosecutors.

Sandy beaches, turquoise waters, palm trees and the chance to spend three years of your life in prison for a crime you didn't commit. Not some place to vacation anytime soon. • backwards and slammed into the line of people waiting at the velvet rope by the front door for Their Turn to get in. Thirteen were injured, several seriously. Though no one died, the event was just awful. Oddly, after the Conscience Point Inn closed up, it reopened briefly under the guidance of a young Wall Street analyst, Christian Curry, who plainly stated that he thought the place would thrive because the party crowd would be attracted by its notoriety.

The Inn, which is waterfront at the site where the first English settlers landed in Southampton in 1640, will be remodeled to its original state as a boathouse, a place where boats were built. The dock slips on the site will be rented out. The place will be a public facility.

Finally, last week, the Town of Southampton announced a fourth attack on the party hearty types, this time hoping to make it less likely they will have anything disruptive to do late at night. The town announced that they are scrutinizing the liquor licenses of 36 taverns and bars they have identified over the twenty-mile east-west stretch of the town, with an eye to closing down those in residential neighborhoods or those that create traffic problems. They will succeed with some of the wilder ones. They may not have to close the more sedate ones. Overall, however, the ultimate goal of providing a community where reasonable respect for neighbors and respect for property are de rigeur is a commendable one.

About 95% of the people who call this place home, or who come here for the summer, do so because of their love for the landscape, the history, the traditions and the almost breathtaking beauty of this place. Those that don't respect that, who couldn't care where they are as long as they get drunk and have fun, amount to no more than 5%. For inaccurately presenting to the world that this is a dominant feature and an accepted activity in this community, we say again, Thank You Barbara. You've issued a wakeup call. You get an Academy Award from us for that. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Ryan

Observations of an Islander #243
Dock-umentary

The Women's Entertainment Network and Cablevision will be taping a new TV show on Shelter Island. The Women's Entertainment Network will build a brand new house and give it away in a contest! The house will be located on 12 Shorewood Road. Well, I'll be entering that (and I'd appreciate it if no one else would)! How great to come home to a home you own! I thought it would be a good idea for me to list some design ideas suitable for island living.

First, the house will be U shaped with the front of the house on land and the sides of the house over water. The center of the house will be open to accommodate the living room/houseboat, which will dock there.

Upon entering the home, you will be in the entranceway, known as the Knock Dock. Straight ahead, through the sliding glass doors, you will enter the living room, where the flock dock, which is actually the front part of the houseboat is. The back part of the houseboat will be a tiny kitchen, bathroom and bedroom. The Flock Dock will be spacious, complete with salt proof wide screen TV, nice couch, two Lazy Boy leather recliners, one with a control panel to pilot the houseboat. Your sweetie will be able to sit in his Lazy Boy, with his trusty big screen TV at his side and, from his Lazy Boy Deluxe Houseboat Edition arm control panel, he can back up the living room like a man backin' a Winnebago out of a garage and get the flock out of there.

While cruising around Shelter Island in your living room, you might get hungry. Right under the couch cushions, for your personal dining convenience, there's a fishing pole/tackle box, so you can both troll for dinner right from your couch while watching "Wheel of Fortune." It just can't get better than that. If you get lucky and catch dinner, you can flip it right over your shoulder into your galley kitchen known as the Wok Dock. How perfect! You get fresh fish and fling the scales and guts right out the window, no more smelly kitchen garbage! The Grandfather Clock behind the couch is a phony, it houses crab nets and jerk rakes. Give your jerk a jerk rake so he can get clams while you get crabs. Clams on the half, boiled crabs and a couple cold brews in the moonlight on the bay, this is the pinnacle of romance on Shelter Island. And if the evening is going really well, you and your honey can retire to the master bedroom known as the ahh, Rooster Dock...

Upon returning home, he can maneuver the Flock Dock back into place and the houseboat rejoins the house. You walk straight into the grounded portion of the house where you have the laundry room known as the Sock Dock, your son's room known as the Jock Dock, and his disgusting bathroom known as the Pock Dock. Further down the hall is your daughter's room known as the Lock Dock, and her doodad and makeup infested bathroom known as the Schlock Dock.

On the other side of the U will be the office known as the Hock Dock. If I'm there, it will be the Crock Dock.

The lawn shall be made of small pebbles, which need neither watering, nor fertilizing, nor mowing, nor mulching, it will surround the house on three sides and be known as the Rock Dock. To make the Rock Dock more pleasing, you can add some nice carved wooden mallards, which will be the Dead Docks.

Highballs will be served at five on the back deck known as the On the Rocks Dock, and if I'm there, ya'll come!

Lessons: the lessons you'll help us, our children and grandchildren remember through the ages: that the price of freedom is eternal vigilance; that all that is required for evil to triumph is for good people to do nothing; and that America's greatest exports are not our movies, Madonna or McDonald's, but our ideals of liberty, equality and democracy and the Bill of Rights. People everywhere yearn for them.

Finally, your big "L" stands for:

Love: The love you show so unselfishly for our country, our beloved homeland, and the love you in turn inspire in us.

Bless you, our young men and women of America, our brave soldiers. We love you and can't wait to see you set foot on our shores again — mission accomplished! — when we can tell you so in person.

In the meantime, keep on givin' 'em "L"!

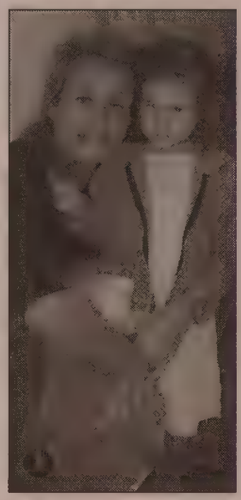
ARTRAGEOUS CREATIONS



"Artrageous" came to the Metropolitan Pavilion in New York where children collaborated with well-known artists to create works that will be auctioned. My daughter, Emily, in her fervor to paint everywhere may have depreciated the value of Linda Moore's piece! Carnival games, clowns and characters from movies and TV shows and famous look-alikes enchanted the children. The event benefits EdwinGould Services for Children and Families which serves and protects children who are victims of domestic abuse, violence, neglect and abandonment. HAMPTONS AT THE GUGGENHEIM

The collaboration between the Guggenheim Museum and the Hamptons International Film Festival (HIFF) started at the Guggenheim with a screening of Owning Mahowney starring Philip Seymour Hoffman, Minnie Driver and John Hurt, an impressive cast for an indie. It is a true story of a bank executive turned compulsive gambler who creates the biggest bank fraud in Canadian history although in today's terms this seemed like a trip to the track. The series continues at the Guggenheim. The 11th Annual HIFF is October 22-26.

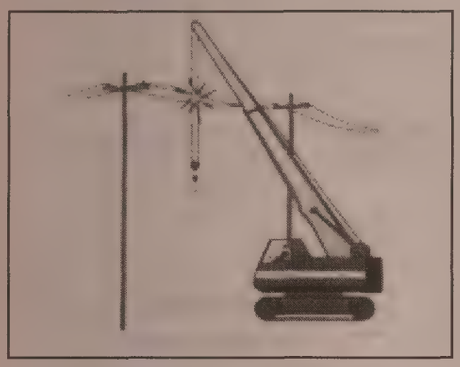
What's Happening On The North Fork

Big Event Of The Week



Public Forum: LIPA's Controversial Overhead Power Line Upgrade

The North Fork is sick and tired of being treated like the South Fork's poor cousin. Riverhead and Southold Town residents are demanding that LIPA consider an all-underground option for its overhead power lines, similar to what was accomplished in Southampton Town in 1999. Because of residential growth on the North Fork, LIPA needs to overhaul and upgrade 9.3 miles of existing transmission lines from downtown Riverhead to Jamesport, and North Fork residents' opposition to an overhead power line upgrade has been overwhelming.

LIPA has researched this issue, and at this forum it will display each proposed route for transmission line upgrades, including overhead and underground alternatives. Reps will also answer questions. WHEN: Monday April 14, 3-5 p.m., 7-9 p.m. WHERE: Jamesport Community Center on Rte. 25, just south of the traffic light. CONTACT: Eve Kaplan, NFEC, 298-8880. –S.W.Simm

COMING UP: CHAMPAGNE BRUNCH AT LA CUVEE – Celebrate the Easter holiday in style at La Cuvée Wine Bar & Bistro with an elegant brunch at the Greenport hotel everyone's talking about. Date: Sunday April 20. Per person: $15.95 includes a glass of bubbly. Call now for reservations: 477-0066.

Food And Wine Or Wine And Food? It Matters.

While the task of pairing food and wine may seem on the surface to be a conundrum, there is actually quite a bit of science that goes into this art.

On the evening of March 27, my friend and wine tasting colleague John Ross gave a lecture on this very topic. John, as many of you know, spent over twenty years pioneering a regional North Fork cuisine and tweaking his wine and food pairing skills at his restaurant, Ross' North Fork. Following are his notes from the March lecture.

When I opened my restaurant in 1973, I was proud to offer N.Y. State Chablis, Lancer's Rosé, and Blue Nun Liebfraumilch. The waitresses asked customers if they wanted red, white, or rosé and whether they wanted a dry wine or a sweet one. These were, at the time, significant decisions.

Now, many years later, those questions are rarely (thankfully!) asked. We are now concerned with grape variety, region, vintage, and of course, price. But we are also concerned with what wine goes with what food. A waiter today might describe a wine as full bodied with soft tannins, or creamy with an aroma of pears. What are the rules?

Your enjoyment is the only absolute rule, but the proper wine undeniably enhances the proper food. In fact, they even make each other taste better! That's why restaurants are important to wine producers. They showcase the product in the right setting.

If only one wine will be served, it should compliment the dominant food, usually the entree.

When planning a dinner, it is important to identify the star. Is it the wine or the food? If you are serving an aged Chateau Margaux, your choice could be a simple rack of lamb or a classic Chateaubriand. If your food is the star – perhaps a fish that you caught yourself – the wine should be chosen carefully but need not be extraordinary.

Tonight, we are going to pair seafood, poultry and vegetables with appropriate wines. Curried mussels with raisins and apples will go well with a semi-dry Riesling (such as Peconic Bay's 2001, $12.99); in-the-shell bay scallops in a beurre blanc with a crisp Chardonnay fermented and aged in stainless (such as the non-vintage Borghese's Chardonette, $7.75); my pecan chicken, with its toasty flavor of nuts and lightly browned bread crumbs, is perfect with a barrel-fermented Chard (such as Lenz' 1999 Silver Label, $14.99); and portabello mushrooms stuffed with red wine risotto and porcini mushrooms would be great with a big Merlot (such as Pellegrini's 1998 Vinter's Pride, $28.99).

These days, if you're planning a dinner party you will want to have a progression of wines. Here are a few simple rules to keep in mind: go from light to heavy, white to red, young to old, and inexpensive to expensive. The same applies to food.

A few rules followed will greatly enhance your enjoyment of food and wine together. But don't forget to have fun with this. The infinite variety is one of life's greatest pleasures. –John C. Ross

The prices for the wines (my suggestions) above are the ones charged at the respective wineries. John operates the Rotisserie and Smokehouse in Southold and he welcomes diners who bring a bottle of wine to enjoy with their dinner. His corking fee, as it has been for thirty years now, is still simply a glass of whatever you're drinking. Cheers.

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Liamo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Coming this summer: outdoor Tiki bar. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [B]

Fauna. A hip and elegant culinary gem. Co-owner and consulting chef Mark Mittelman's menu astutely incorporates Asian influences into superbly conceived New American dishes. Tuna sashimi shines as an appetizer, as does duck confit atop sautéed spinach with walnuts and dried cranberries. Try and find room for the butternut squash pot stickers. The all-star cast of entrees includes Southeast Asian steak salad, pan-roasted bourbon chicken and a Napoleon of roasted vegetables. Desserts rotate daily. Extensive wine list with sixteen local vineyards. Entrees $20-$26. Route 25, Aquebogue. 722-5813. (Trueman-Honey, 6/7/02). [A,F]

La Plage. Exciting and imaginative haute cuisine just steps away from a Long Island Sound beach. Chef/owner Wayne Wadington's menu undergoes constant revision, reflecting his selection of premium ingredients or his latest inspiration for a sauce. His creations fly off the menu almost as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance, put in for the Yukon Gold potato soup with an oyster beignet,. the roulade of local crab with succulent micro greens or the Griggstown Farm quail in smoked bacon. Superb wine list. Exceptional desserts. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 11/1/02). [R,V]

The Red Door on Main Road, Mattituck

Red Door. Red Alert! Stephan Mazzella, formerly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [E,N]

The owners of Fauna

Ross' Rotisserie and Smokehouse. A casual, homey eat-in or take-out spot opened by John Ross, former chef/owner of Ross' North Fork Restaurant. Great rotisserie and crispy fried chicken; marinated, honey-glazed duck legs; hickory-smoked spareribs; homemade soups and chowders; many cooked-from-scratch side dishes. Every Friday fish fry is an excellent value. A special 6-pound LI duck, cooked crisp, boned and quartered, accompanied by duck sauce and a garnish of apricots and cranberries ($19.99) is available by reservation the day before. Open 7 days 12-8. Route 48, Southold, 765-9655. (Simm, 10/5/01). [U]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [M,S]

Sultan's Kitchen. At last, a good, authentic Eastern Mediterranean for the region. The emphasis is on Turkish cooking, one of the world's healthiest cuisines. The spacious dining room is non-descript, as this is a former pancake emporium; the subtleties are all in the flavoring of the food. Soups such as red lentil and tripe are spiced just right. The varied appetizers favor vegetarians while the main courses concentrate on lamb and chicken, often with delectable results. Turkish baklava and kadayif are exceptional finishing touches. Entrees $6.50-$15.95. 1077 Old Country Road, Riverhead. 369-9766. (Bradbrook, 8/9/02.)

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

The Game

It is so hard being out in the college world in Boston and having no idea what is going on with the opposite sex. Guys, as far as I know, are completely clueless when it comes to girls. We never know what they are thinking, we never know how they are going to react, so in essence, we know absolutely nothing. Guys know less about girls then we do about any other subject in the world including outer space. In fact, I would go as far to say that guys on this planet know more about distant galaxies than we do about girls.

I would tell you about the girls' perspective, but I know nothing about them.

It is interesting to do everything you can to understand them even though there really is no hope. In a way, trying to predict how girls will react is like trying to predict the stock market. No one really knows what is going to happen. But that does not mean that we are not going to try and figure it out anyway.

About a week ago I finally got up the nerve to ask out a girl that I liked. We went out to dinner. It was nothing fancy at all, but it was really cool to be out there on the scene in Boston.

As far as I could tell, the date went well. I walked her home, said that I would give her a call the next day and headed back to my place, which was walking distance away.

The following day I went to go meet up with my two good friends Jim and Souksan. For clarification, Jim is a guy and Souksan is a girl. I think that it is also important to note that they both are in relationships. Both of them were extremely interested in my date the night before.

I met Jim and Souksan in a small deli where you can order burritos and milkshakes. Our plan was to get some food and then head off to the library and study together. This was not an uncommon protocol for a Sunday afternoon.

We got our food and sat down where both Jim and Souksan immediately started the interrogation.

Jim: So how was last night?

Souksan: Yeah Dave, how was last night?

Me: Last night was... good. I think.

Jim: Good? What does that mean? Did you take her out to eat?

Me: Yes.

Souksan: Did you pay for dinner?

Me: Yes.

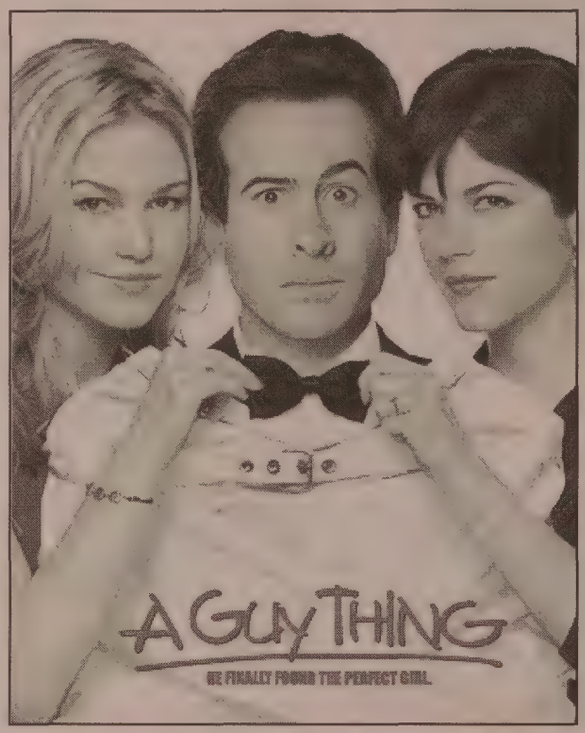
Jim: Smart Dave, very smart, that was a real good move man.

Me: Thanks dude.

Silence, then a bite of a burrito.

Souksan: So where is she from?

Me: I think that she said she was from New York



but I can't be sure.

Souksan: You weren't paying attention; Dave you ALWAYS have to be paying attention, what did I tell you?

Me: Always pay attention. Yes, I am sure she is from New York.

Jim: Well that's good.

Me: I'm supposed to call her today; I told her that I would call her. I really should just call her right now on my cell phone. I was telling her about you guys.

I pulled out my cell phone.

Souksan and Jim together: DON'T CALL HER!

Me: Why not?

Souksan: Are you an idiot? If you call her that will make you seem anxious.

Me: But I said that I would call her. I can't go back on my word.

Jim: It doesn't matter. Souksan's right. Whatever you do don't call her. Then she'll think about you more and then she will be even happier when you do call her. You got to play the game Dave. This is serious business. You never call immediately the next day that makes no sense.

Me: You make no sense. I think I should call her.

Souksan: If you call her you might as well just forget about this girl because she is not going to like it if you call her. If you have to do something you can text message her. That is fair at this stage.

Me: Text message? What stage?

Jim: Yes, text message is an excellent form of communication at this stage in the game.

Me: Have my friends gone insane? I feel like I'm in the twilight zone with you guys! I'm calling her, that is that.

Souksan: Wait, it may be okay to call her now, but only on one condition. I'm being serious here. Let me just ask you one question and based on that answer I will tell you on whether or not it is safe to call her at this point.

Me: Okay, what is your question?

Souksan: Did she give you the googlely eyes?

Me: Are you kidding me?

Jim and Souksan together: JUST ANSWER THE QUESTION!

Me: What the hell are the googlely eyes?

Jim: Get with the program Dave. Man, you are hopeless.

Me: Shut up Jim!

At this point my cell phone started to ring. I pulled it out of my pocket and looked at the number on the screen.

Me: (Gulp) I think that it is her guys.

Jim and Souksan: DON'T ANSWER IT!

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Identity

A car's visual identity has always been an important part of its character. When I was growing up in the fifties and sixties, it was so easy to tell one make of car from another. In fact, many kids played a game on car trips, where, from the back seat, they would count the different makes of passing automobiles.

Currently, Buick (of all companies) is running very clever television commercials showing the ghost of Harvey Earl hawking the merits of the Buick motorcar. Of course, the general public doesn't know who the heck Harvey Earl is, although the mean age of the target audience that Buick is aiming at might. Earl is famous in automotive circles as the design chief of General Motors in the '50s and '60s.

I mention this because it was designers like Harley Earl who gave GM cars of this era character and identity. His portholes in the front fenders of all late '40s and '50s Buicks were a great design detail. Although I believe they were lifted from PininFarina's brilliant 1948 Cisitalia coupe.

When we were kids, Buicks were an easy call. We could even tell the models apart. The expensive "Roadmaster" had four portholes while the entry level "Special" had a meager three portholes. I believe next year Buick is bringing back fender portholes. It's a great retro design detail; with the influx of retro cars, I'm surprised they haven't done it sooner.

Fords looked totally different from Chevrolets, MGs bore no resemblance to Triumphs or Alfas. In general, cars had interesting and varied individuality.

What started me on this subject in the first place is the fact that last month the new 2003 Honda Accord was introduced. It's a rather attractive car, with a European flare, but what jarred my sense of good design was the giant "H" in the center of the grill. Honda has done a similar thing with its upscale Acura division, where they've put a giant letter "A" in the center of the grill.

What's going on here? Is this a desperate attempt for brand identity? The attempt is so obvious and misdirected that those giant letters actually ruin the look of the front of the cars.

PT Cruiser

What has happened to unique design? Damn the early '80s Audi 5000 and original Ford Taurus. Those egg-shaped cars started a trend that has soured automotive design because everything now looks like it belongs in an egg carton.

Then along came the SUV plague. Boxes on wheels. SUVs don't look like they belong in an egg carton, they are the egg carton. When we were kids watching all those Buck Rogers serials on television, the promise of the future was for streamlined rocket cars zapping across elevated highways. Instead, today, most of us are driving lunch boxes on wheels, the only zapping they do is from fuel pump to fuel pump.

Is it pure coincidence that a $25,000 Ford Explorer bares a strong resemblance to a $75,000 Range Rover? Why does the hottest new ride in town, the strangely conceived Porsche SUV, closely resemble the BMW SUV?

Speaking of BMW, when it comes to identity, they are trying very hard to make a statement. But there's one problem. In their attempt to be creative, they are producing some truly beauty-impaired automobiles. The over-electrically engineered flagship series sedans has one of the wackiest rear trunk designs in the industry. It looks like a guillotined elephant's trunk unceremoniously plopped on the rear end of the automobile.

The spanking new BMW Z4 sports car is the most awkward looking thing I've seen in decades. In the world of the weird, it comes in at a close second to the '60s British Daimler Dart SP250 sports car. Those of you out there who know the Dart know what I'm talking about – and you're smiling.

Sorry BMW, your cars are mechanically superb, and the Mini is indeed clever, but somehow the ghost of Helen Keller must have invaded the minds of your design team when they designed the 7 series and Z4 sports car.

There are very few unique looking cars. Porsches have a look all their own, dating, amazingly, back to 1948. The PT Cruiser. The new Mini and Ford Thunderbird. There is some hope. But, Harley Earl, where are you?

Shop 'til You Drop....With Maria Tennariello

Oh no, just when we thought we were done with the snow, we're back where we started from...Shovels, brooms, snow blowers and the like. When will it really end? Don't get those bikinis out yet...

Hampton Bays' Val's Closet on Montauk Highway is doing and up to 50% off sale right now. Designer clothing at prices we all can afford. Go for it...

Have you been waiting all season for the real deal sale at Christopher Fischer Cashmere Collections on Jobs Lane in Southampton and Main Street in East Hampton? Well the big "Easter Sale" begins on Friday, April 11 and will run through April 21. Look for a tremendous selection of ladies, men's and accessories in pure cashmere that are marked 70% off. For home, there is a huge assortment of stylish cashmere blankets and furniture floor models that are marked half price. This sale is worth several visits as the merchandise is restocked daily. You know the deal; the early bird always catches the worm. So get going!

A new shop has just opened in on Wall Street (100 feet off Main Street) called Wall Street Bead & Jewelry Exchange. They are dedicated to supplying professional jewelry designers, crafts people and hobbyists with a complete selection of beads and findings from around the world for over ten years. Wall Street Bead is a direct importer of semi precious and precious gemstone beads and 18/22 k gold beads, clasps and findings from India. Also included in their inventory is a full selection of Swarovski crystals, glass beads from Czechoslovakia, Delica beads from Japan and bone, wood, cinnabar, cloisonné beads and freshwater pearls from China. Love their necklaces, earrings, bracelets and vintage Indian jewelry, you will too...This is a must see shop, so don't pass it by. Give a call for hours at 283-6843.

At Dansk Factory Outlet on Main Street in Southampton you will find all dinnerware, flatware and drinkware on sale...Lot's to choose from, no kidding.

Men and ladies clothing are reduced 50% to 75% off all their sale items at J. McLaughlin on Jobs Lane in Southampton. Hooray!

At Cardiere et Cie on Main Street in Southampton there is a designer collection sale with 50% to 70% off...WOW!

Also on Main Street in Southampton look for men's and ladies swimwear and snowboarding wear at Flying Point Surf & Sport...Make up your mind, sun or snow? Or both?

Don't mind if I let you know that all tennis clothing at Tennis East on Main Sreet in Southampton are 30% to 50% off. Get the snowblower and clean off the tennis court...

Twist on Jobs Lane in Southampton is having a clearance sale with girls and ladies clothing at 50 % to 80% off. Now that's almost freebie...

Don't pass through Bridgehampton without stopping off at Country Gear Ltd. on Main Street to check out their "Spring Inventory Sale" of Loom Italia outdoor furniture merchandise throughout the month of April...this furniture is produced in Italy and although it may "look" like wicker, it is constructed with mahogany frames and woven-wire material that is virtually indestructible. Made to withstand the sun and rain, the items available are chaises, dining chairs and tables as well as lounge chairs and side tables. All spring sale merchandise is being sold at 30% off retail and the quantities are limited, so get there soon!

Check out the nice selection of 18th and 19th century English and French furniture at Huntting House Antiques at the Red Horse Plaza, Montauk Highway in East Hampton...

Hot...hot off the press...Do you want to know what's new at Long Wharf Wines, 12 Bay Street in Sag Harbor? A new French vodka has just arrived called Ciroc, which is made from "snap frost" grapes, cold fermented and distilled five times for extra smoothness. In addition to its outstanding flavor, the unique packaging has also been turning heads in restaurants and bars. There will be a real vodka tasting at on Saturday, April 26 from 3-6. See you there! Give a call at 725-2400.

Nearby at Out Of The Closet on Division Street there are hot to trot vintage clothing from the 550's to the 70's to choose from. Look for fun, funky and sexy items all at reduced prices. Hat, gloves 'dead stock' boots, winter coats from the 2930's and one-of-a-kind outfits. Love this stuff...

I Have to get ready to cook some pasta for the gang (grandchildren) that are coming over on Sunday. We have the entire day planned...Play some basketball on my neighbor Bradley's court, feed the seagulls at Long Beach, have and early dinner and then go shopping! That's another story...The apple doesn't fall far from the tree...

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"ASSEMBLAGE" AT SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE

While "What goes with what" is a principle evoked by semiology, it's a particularly fascinating concept when applied to assemblage. More intriguing is the fact that often "nothing seems to go with anything" with assemblage, a practice captured so well by curator Beth Giles in this exhibit at Southampton College's Avram Gallery.

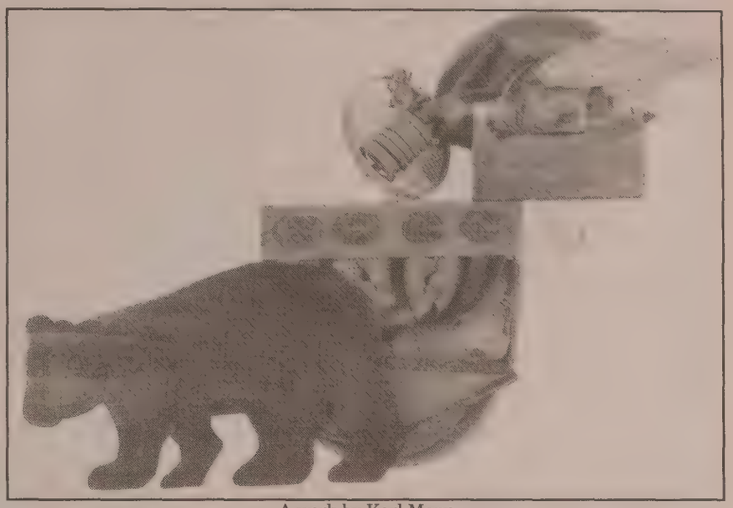
The key word is "seems." The mixmatch of objects and their placement becomes a puzzle in some works where meaning is important. In other pieces, the disparate items are the art's raison d'etre.

Karl Mann's work combines both ideas. His incongruent imagery may be the primary aim; the fragmentation created by his rubber doll head and a single hand gives one piece a characteristically demeanor. Faces taken out of context appear again in another work: an Indian head and JFK. Here the shape of the heads and their compositional juxtaposition may be the chief objectives, rather than a suggestion of Surrealism. Mr. Mann's use of spiked forms and varied textures in another work serves the same purpose.

While Jim Gemake's mailbox evokes a straightforward narrative rather than a puzzle, especially with its title from a Martin Scorsese movie, "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," his "Eye on Film" featuring a parrot remains a mystery regarding its meaning.

Here, the title does not correspond to the title not do the objects relate to each other. In another piece, Mr. Gemake's "Weight and C" shares a similarity with Mr. Mann's works, which focus on diverse and often incongruent shapes and textures.

Conversely, David Slater's "Top Hat Pole" literally fits together nicely, no searching for meaning necessary. Even so, his "Hermes" is a dense myriad of objects (ie. a golf ball, miniature figures, a pair of dice) that seemingly has no connection. But we are tempted to interpret their relationship, nonetheless, including life's haphazard, unpredictable nature.



A work by Karl Mann

Finally, Elaine Grove's sculpture piece on the floor grabs our attention as well. The contraption that a clown figure rides appears to be an old-fashioned farm implement, recalling the hero's homemade transportation in David Lynch's film, The Straight Story. Why does the clown (who has no arms) remind this critic of Mr. Lynch's protagonist, a senior citizen determined to ride his machine through the countryside to visit his brother? He was also considered a handicapped clown by many, figuratively speaking.

The show will be on view at Southampton College's Avram Gallery until April 22.

Honoring the Artist: Nicola Simbari

This week's cover artist, Nicola Simbari, could be a local resident given the East End's international flavor, but he hails from Italy instead. Even so, the cover reflects our own indigenous coastal nature as does Calabria, the fishing village of Mr. Simbari's birth. While the colorful and whimsical sails cut a precarious path as the boats make their way through the water, the work's spirit also mirrors the Hamptons' joie d' vivre. We can't wait for summer.

Evidently, Mr. Simbari couldn't wait to be an artist either. His family moved to Rome when Mr. Simbari was a child, his father working as an architect. It was natural that the young boy became attracted to Vatican museums and the Sistine Chapel. Later on, he studied painting and architecture at Rome's Accademia delle Belle Arti.

Mr. Simbari didn't stop there. In the early 1950s, he designed the set for a musical, Tarantella Napoletana, winning an award for his efforts. More recognition followed: a gold medal for a poster in a national competition; a commission to create the murals for the Italian display at the World's Fair in Brussels.

Twenty years later, Mr. Sambari faced new challenges, learning and developing the art of lithography, sculpture and photography. A myriad of exhibits followed, allowing Mr. Simbari international exposure in such diverse venues as Paris, New York, Chicago, Germany, Japan and Monte Carlo.

Mr. Simbari's stylistic influences are just as diverse: Braque, Miro, Van Gogh and Gauguin having major influences. For example, his "Angelique," with its bold color, brush strokes and slight abstraction recalls Van Gogh. His "Red Parco" reminds one of the exotic as evoked by Gauguin.

Besides figurative work, Mr. Simbari's cityscapes are equally intriguing. His "Lower Park Avenue" and "57th at Fifth" capture a fantasy-filled Manhattan that filmmakers like Martin Scorsese take to heart. It's a view that most New Yorkers don't realize or recognize as part of their city's essential contradiction.

Especially appealing is his "Fifth Avenue," a closer perspective, celebrating a corner construction site. It's a realistic yet expressionistic depiction, filled with sensual imagery where we can sense the sights, sounds and smells of the Big Apple.

Which goes to prove that Mr. Sambari seems at home wherever he is painting.

American Icon: The Art Of John Chamberlain

Guild Hall Museum presents this exhibit of John Chamberlain's work from April 12 to July 27. Chamberlain has been living and working on Shelter Island for fifteen years and he is one of the most distinguished and respected sculptors of his time. He is known for his abstract sculptures constructed with brightly painted ribbons of crushed car metal. The opening reception will be held on Saturday, April 12, from 4 to 6 p.m.

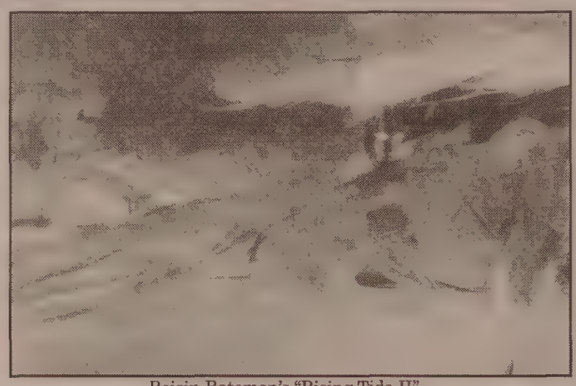
Los Todos: A Family Of Mam Indians

This exhibit of Hans Namuth portraits of a family of Mam Indians from Guatemala will be on display at Guild Hall Museum from April 12 to July 27. Namuth is well known for his portraits of artists, musicians, writers and famous personalities. He did a famous series of photographs of Jackson Pollack while vacationing on eastern Long Island in 1950. The portraits of the Mam Indians was the result of a return trip to Guatemala in 1978 (Namuth had first encountered the Mam during a 1948 trip). There will be an opening reception on Saturday, April 12, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Alice In Wonderland

Alice will be running down the rabbit hole and appearing at the Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor this weekend. Stages' newest musical production will bring this classic story to life on Friday, April 11 at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, April 12 and 13, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $15 for adults, $12 for children 12 and under. For reservations call 725-9500. An additional show at 7 p.m. on Saturday will benefit the Hampton Day School (call 537-1240 ext. 324 for tickets and information for this performance).



Roisin Bateman's "Rising Tide II"

Emerging Light: A Celebration Of Spring

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Head Of State, Assassination Tango

"Ambition should be made of sterner stuff," Shakespeare observed of Caesar. This could also be said of the somewhat less imperially inclined Chris Rock and Robert Duvall who have movies in which they star in performance and as writer and director. Mr. Rock is less ambitious, he merely aspires to the presidency of these United States in his comedy, Head of State. In it he is proposed to run against a George W-like, shoe-in candidate whose slogan is, "God Bless America – and no place else." Besides being a God-fearing, America firster, the sure-winner is Sharon Stone's cousin and a war hero, unlike little Georgie Dubblya so, he is sure to win the popular vote. How could Chris win? A black D.C. Alderman who's lost his girl and his car, win against those odds? Simple answer: he's not supposed to. He is chosen to lose and set up someone else for the next election.

Mr. Rock is one of the canniest and sharpest exponents of truism humor. His script, written with his long time partner, Ali LeRoi, is studded with barbs that catch your thinking mechanism and prick it into a wake up position. They spin tightly in a film as loose as an untied noose. Slippery and unfinished, its' untied ends are improv-stylish and certainly, the play-by-play between Rock and Bernie Mac, (the larger-than-large politically *un*correct "Bill Cosby" TV dad) is smashingly exhilarating. Don't expect Head of State, to raise the bar of black and white truths. It is too tentative to clearly say what it takes jabs at-shady politics, pale and ashy blandness, dusky, dark stereotypes and, stained red, white and blue ideals. A liberal black president? Ambition may be wanting the biggest piece of the pie. Rock has at least poked a finger into it.

I think Robert Duvall as Little Caesar. Beginning his career as such a nice guy, a few tough and fibery, meaty roles (The Great Santini, Apocalypse, Now) turned his bald head to dominating, nasty, self-adoring rogues with a knotty body and personality and, a knotted pigtail, of all things. His talents have added many odd appendages: a sweat stained cowboy hat, guitar pickin' and country western singin' and drawl, preachin' (as in The Apostle, his 1997 outing as writer/director/star/dictator), then Tango dancing! No end to the tic-tacky nervous, squinty-eyed, mean and seedy, unlikable mannerisms.

Assassination Tango, embodies most of the bony parts above and they clank together well enough to satisfy Duvall fans who love to dislike his character. The aggressive macho machine Bobby has written for himself, is a doting Brooklyn daddy who is hired to kill a fascist general in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Guaranteed, Bob is going to be a-swirling and a-swingin' around, doin' Tangos. He assumes you'll think of his fleet-footedness as a metaphor for the art of killing. Golly, he shouldn't settle for Caesar. He could be a Commander-in-Chief.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-wining European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Nowhere In Africa (+)

This movie won an Oscar this year as best foreign language film. It is playing in only one Manhattan theater, Lincoln Plaza Cinemas, and received little publicity before the Academy Awards Show. I went to see it after the Awards show, and it was sold out so I had to return on a second occasion.

The subject matter concerns two young German Jews who get permission to leave Hitler's Germany in 1938 to go to Kenya and manage a farm. Walter (Merab Ninidze) goes to Kenya first, and later sends for his wife Jettel (Juliane Kohler) and their daughter to join him. The rest of their families perish in the Holocaust. In Germany before the Nazis took over, Jettel was a haughty, privileged member of the middle class. Her husband asks her to buy a refrigerator for their home in Kenya, but she spends the money on an expensive dress and carts along a set of fine dinnerware.

The Jewish refugees are treated by the British as enemy aliens and are interned. Jettel has difficulty adjusting to their reduced circumstances and has an affair. Jettel and Walter have a lovely, precious daughter, Regina, played as a five-year-old by Lea Kurka and later as a juvenile by Karoline Eckertz. Both young women are superb in their roles, the younger near dominating the film. An African servant Owuor (Sidede Onyulo) is extraordinary in his role.

The developing relationship between husband and wife, the adjustment of their daughter as she grows up and falls in love with Africa, and the knowledge of what is going on in Europe make the move a near epic. It is a good film, well worth seeing, but not a great one.

Before Ed Koch was a film critic for Dan's Papers he was the mayor of New York

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Throughout history there have always been people in bondage in one way or another. At this time and place sadly we are reminded of that history and look forward to a rebirth of freedom and redemption that will hopefully be echoed in the spring holidays of Passover and Easter.

Family and friends reflect large celebrations of years past for these holidays where many traditional dishes served have a deep-rooted heritage. And yet this year I look to the cuisine of Italy, a cuisine close to my heart.

When Edda Servi Machlin wrote her comprehensive work The Classic Cuisine of the Italian Jews, a memoir on a vanished way of life in 1981, Dodd Mead publishers, I was thoroughly captivated. These were the years of extensive travel to Italy for me escorting groups of students to study there. In one section of the book Edda recounts her family traditions for Passover, and the busy days immediately preceding the holiday. Some of the dishes for the observance included capretto, or baby goat. While likened to lamb it is considered much more delicate and tender. Spring lamb may be substituted if goat is not available. Spinaci saltati or sautéed spinach cooked with garlic infused olive oil is a timely accompaniment and ricciarelli di Siena or Siena almond cookies also graced the family's Seder table.

The main door of the Servi home was kept open during the entire Seder to invite the hungry and the needy, no matter their religious persuasion, to come in and share in the festivities.

EDDA SERVI'S BABY GOAT FOR PESACH

A kid is the baby goat just as lamb is the baby sheep. If kid is not available you can try it with small spring lamb.

Serves 6

3 pounds kid chops
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
3-4 stems Italian parsley, (leaves removed) tied in a bouquet
1 1/2 cups cold water
2 egg yolks
Juice of 1 lemon

1. Place chops in a skillet with oil, salt, pepper, garlic and parsley bouquet. Add 1 1/2 cups cold water and simmer, covered, for 1 hour or until meat if fork tender. Discard parsley bouquet.

2. Mix egg yolks and lemon juice, turn heat off and add mixture at once. Shake the skillet to mix the sauce. Serve immediately.

SPINACI SALTATI

Sautéed Garlic Spinach

I'm certain that Ms. Servi intends for any olive used in her dishes to be extra-virgin olive oil.

Serves 6

3 pounds small leaf bulk spinach
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1/2 cup olive oil

1. Remove stems and roots from spinach. Rinse in cold water many times until any trace of sand is removed. Place in a large pot with 1/4-teaspoon salt and no water other than the water the spinach retains from washing. Cook over moderately high-heat, covered, for 3-4 minutes. Lift with a fork and transfer to a colander to drain.

2. In a large skillet, place the remaining salt, pepper, garlic and oil. Cook, stirring until garlic becomes golden brown, but not burnt. Discard garlic and add spinach. Cook, uncovered, stirring frequently, until spinach has lost most of the liquid and begins to get crisp.

Note: If you prefer, you can mince the garlic instead of crushing it and leave it in the spinach.

RICCIARELLI DI SIENA

These Siena almond cookies were a favorite of the Servi family at Purim, Passover and a welcome dessert at any dinner party.

These are best eaten within 1 or 2 days.

Yields 24 to 30 pieces

2 egg whites
Dash salt
1 1/4 cups granulated sugar
Freshly grated rind of 1 orange
1 teaspoon almond extract
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
10 ounces finely chopped blanched almonds
1/4 cup cake meal
2 tablespoons (pareve) non-dairy margarine
Confectioners sugar

1. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff peaks form. Gradually add 1-cup sugar and beat until you have the consistency of marshmallow. Add the orange rind, almond and vanilla extracts, and finally add the almonds. Mix until you have a rather hard paste.

2. Combine the cake meal with 1/4-cup sugar. Generously grease a baking sheet with the margarine and sprinkle it with the flour/sugar mixture.

3. Divide the almond paste into 24-30 equal parts and, with greased hand, shape each into a diamond. Place 2-inches apart on the prepared baking sheet and bake in preheated 250- degree oven for 12 or 13 minutes.

4. Remove the cookies from the oven while they are still white and, while they are still hot, sprinkle lightly with confectioner's sugar. Carefully remove to a cooling rack. When thoroughly cooled store in a tightly closed tin box at room temperature.

Side Dish By Aji Jones

The Dish hears of a new seafood shop coming to Southampton. Captain Phil Gay, owner of East End Clambakes Catering in Water Mill, has announced the opening of a new establishment at the location formerly known as Fletcher's Sweet Sensations (590 County Rd.). Captain Phil's East End Clambakes will offer his famous seafood specialties for take out. Sample items that will be offered include full lobster dinners, shrimp platters, seared tuna, crab cakes, grilled swordfish, jumbo shrimp stuffed with lump crabmeat, grilled vegetables, corn on the cob, steamers, steamed mussels, and more. Prepared soups, sauces and salads will be available for purchase and most hot meals and entrees will be cooked to order. Customers will be able to call in their order and pick up a lobster dinner ready to eat within hours or walk in and order a dinner to go. Captain Phil's will be open Wednesday through Sunday from 3 p.m. until 10p.m. starting Memorial Day weekend. Fans of Phil's catering company East End Clambakes can rest easy however – Phil will be operating that business out of the same location, continuing to offer traditional style clambakes on the beach.

Two popular North Fork wineries are offering discounts for Easter. In honor of the holiday from Saturday, April 12 through Saturday, April 19 (both will be closed on Sunday) Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards will offer special markdowns on many of their critically acclaimed wines. At Bedell, buy three or more of the 2000 Bedell Reserve Chardonnay, Main Road Red or 1999 Bedell Cellars Merlot and receive a 15% discount. At Corey Creek buy three or more of the 2000 Corey Creek Reserve Chardonnay, 2001 Domaines ÇC Rosé or the 1999 Corey Creek Merlot and also receive a 15% discount. As well, buy any three of these bottles and receive a complimentary wine jelly. Current available jellies include: merlot jelly, raspberry wine jelly, Rugosa rosé jelly, white wine jelly and hot pepper jelly. For more information call Bedell Cellars at (631) 734-7537 or Corey Creek Vineyards (631) 765-4168.

Nick & Toni's in East Hampton will continue their winter dinner series "Making a Difference" on Friday, April 25 with "Tuscan Peasant Food." The evening begins with wine and hors d'oeuvres followed by a five-course meal prepared by Executive Chef Joseph Realmuto and Chef de Cuisine Seth Caswell. A selected wine will complement each course. The cost for the evening will be $125, plus tax and gratuity, per person. A percentage (20%) of the meal will be donated to Quail Hill Community Farm and East Hampton Town Baymen Association. Space is limited to 90 persons, so call early to make reservations at (631) 324-3550. Also, keep an eye out for the next dinner taking place on May 18.

Saracen in Wainscott has a Family Style Sunday dinner. The restaurant, bar and lounge located on Georgica Pond serves family style meals every Sunday throughout the year. Also stop by Fridays for live new world music with "Europa", or come in for drinks at the bar. The lounge has proven to be quite a hotspot on Saturday nights.

Well it seems that Hamptons Restaurant Week was an overwhelming success for all who were involved. The joint regional marketing campaign, organized by WordHampton Public Relations, started as a restaurant only campaign and then grew to include wine, lodging, transportation and retail food. Participating restaurants and businesses indicated a surge in sales, some by more than 50%. If you are one of the unlucky few that missed out on this great deal, you shouldn't worry; Hamptons Restaurant Week will be back next year. Organizer Steve Haweeli comments, "this event was an unprecedented success. We will certainly make this an annual event and plan to make next year's event bigger to include more restaurants and other local businesses. We want to let all local businesses know that this event is open to everyone." Thankfully, it sounds as if Hamptons Restaurant Week is here to stay.

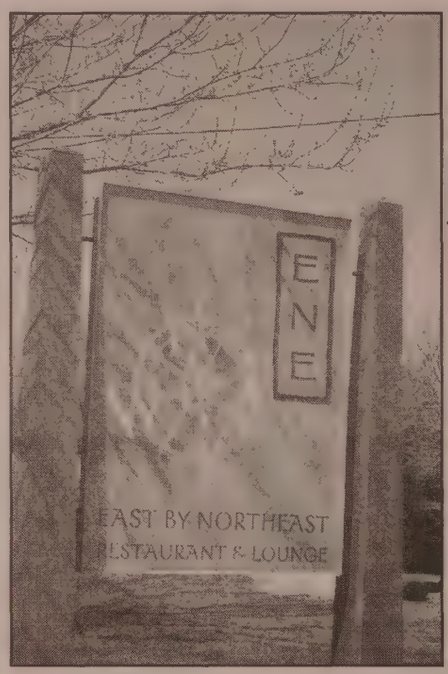
East By Northeast

Edgemere Rd., Montauk
631-668-2878

In Montauk, with the limitless supplies of fresh fish right at your back door, there is always the opportunity to create extraordinary dishes. Some places are able to create good dishes; other places verge on creating the sublime. The latter is the case at East by Northeast.

The name insinuates what the restaurant delivers: the fresh seafood of the Northeastern Atlantic, enhanced with some invigorating sauces, herbs and cooking styles (Chinese, Japanese and Thai) from the Eastern Pacific. Chef, Anthony Silvestri, provides an eclectic menu that not only satisfies, but also titillates, any palate. It is no mystery why the American Culinary Federation recently awarded him the Gold Medal for best appetizer at the South Nassau Communities Hospital's Decade of Good Taste. When I heard about this accomplishment, I had to check out East By Northeast for myself.

It was a Sunday evening when my dinner companion, Laure, and I arrived at the restaurant. As the hostess led us to our seat, we realized that we had picked the perfect time to eat at this particular place. East By Northeast rests on the shores of Fort Pond. As the sun sets, it trickles into the water and squiggles its way to your table– an incredible view.



Our seats at the table were not ordinary chairs but cozy love seats. These orange sofas, and their soft pillows, blend with the red wooden tables and floors, giving the restaurant some Zen flare. The New Age music, red lights above and the elegant layout of tables and chairs evokes the atmosphere of a stylish lounge. It seems like a great place to come to for late night munchies while hanging at the bar or relaxing on the round, leather sofa nearby.

While awaiting a sampler tray of appetizers, we browsed the wine list (filled with Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon, Pinot Noir, Shiraz, Merlot, and more) and enjoyed the warm rolls. Our bottle of Merlot greatly enhanced the appetizer dishes: jumbo shrimp with sweet chili sauce, seared diver sea scallops with mango, cashews and birds eye chiles, rice paper wrapped lobster rolls, and (the Gold Medal award winning) Peking duck tacos.

The sweet chili cocktail sauce was sweet indeed, giving the shrimp a unique zest of flavor that you cannot get anywhere else (I am sure the three citrus panzo sauce does the same for the pork and spring rolls). The plump scallop meat was juicy and deliciously coated in a tangy. When we bit into the lobster rolls, the lobster meat with lettuce and carrots was more than refreshing. Finally, there were the Peking duck tacos. The crispy, but not-too-hard, shell was filled with perfectly cooked duck meat that, even on its own, was sumptuous. Meanwhile, the barbecue sauce and the avocado salsa (an original treat) exemplified why this dish was a winner.

As we took our time with these amazing appetizers, we also had to take our time in choosing an equally amazing entrée. Although some of its best dishes are comprised of seafood, East By Northeast offered all kinds of plates: lemon thyme grilled chicken with Chinese long beans and chive whipped potatoes, grilled black Angus sirloin with wilted baby spinach and Thai fries, grilled Montauk swordfish with scallion potatoes and roasted corn salsa, pad Thai noodles with chicken, shrimp and vegetables, and more.

I opted for the Japanese hot rock– a sliced Filet Mignon in a sweet soy dipping sauce that I could cook at the table. It comes with a blue flaming bowl on which you place the hot rock. You then place these tasty slivers of steak on top until you are ready to sink your teeth into them.

Meanwhile, Laure chose the honey-soy roasted Atlantic salmon with butternut squash risotto and crisp beets. When she told me how the meat was practically melting in her mouth, I had to try it for myself. The mingling of honey and soy flavor was tantalizing and the butternut squash risotto was ripe with a sweet flavor that was a perfect plate mate for the salmon.

And on to dessert. Instead of putting the pressure on us to choose, our waiter, Damon, brought us out a sampler that included homemade strawberry shortcake, banana nut tiramisu, chocolate truffle cake, and an espresso ice cream meringue with Oreo hazelnut crust. Fruit and sweetness lovers will drool

Dining In The Hamptons

Home Grown: The Case For Local Food

Ann Cooper, the executive chef at the Ross school in East Hampton welcomed about 100 guests representing local farmers, farm groups, wineries, restaurants, caterers and consumers to their Ross School Café Spring Social. Brian Halweil, a research associate with World Watch Institute out of Washington, DC inspired the audience with his talk on connecting with local farmers and the importance of locally grown foods.

"How could a fruit grown an ocean away be as good as locally grown," he asked? "There are three big costs," he continued, "energy, local economy and taste." The trend for foods that travels roughly 1500 to 2500 miles from farm to plate requires a staggering amount of oil and the dependence that comes from it (a timely concern). Local farmers are becoming more marginal players in the chain as agribusiness takes over. Most marketers prefer to import fresh food supplies from more commercial resources.

Mr. Halweil discussed the utilization of communities taking advantage of marketing their own home grown fresh foods. "Every $10 spent locally generates twice as much as $10 spent for food grown elsewhere. A third consequence of course is food quality, safety risks and taste. There is a craving for the source of our food as food can encounter endless opportunities for exposure to problems. And it can't be said enough, that we are what we eat.

By purchasing locally grown food products we encounter a greater level of intimacy and trust by purchasing from local farmers. Farmers markets fill a niche for very high quality and flavor. It was suggested that a local group of food suppliers get together under one roof to retail to the local community. Is this Utopia? Perhaps, but it is also food for thought (no pun intended). And I loved this bit of information: There is a diner in Vermont where everything they serve is grown within a 50-mile radius of the diner. Why not here on the East End? Long Island is an incredible land and ocean resource.

over the fresh strawberry sauce and the soft shortcake. Those with a taste for creamy and soft will enjoy the banana tiramisu before it goes down too quickly. The chocolate truffle cake is rich enough for any chocolate freak. Finally, the espresso meringue is, like many other dishes on the menu, a unique delight.

There is so much more that can be said about East By Northeast. However, the truth of the matter remains that you must try it for yourself. When you open the menu, you have no idea what is in store for you. It has original ideas like tempura onion rings, and takes common catches and dishes and makes them more than sensational.

HOME IMPROVMENT

Increase Your Property Value By 15% (It's Easy)

To many homeowners, a thick, green lawn brings a great sense of pride. There's also a financial incentive to having a great-looking lawn: According to The Lawn Institute, homeowners may realize up to a 15-percent increase in property value from a well-maintained lawn and landscape.

Maintaining your lawn doesn't have to be a massive undertaking. All you need to remember are three easy steps to having a fuller, more beautiful lawn:

1. Fertilize. For the best-looking lawn, fertilize according to label directions during the active growth period. So for warm-season grasses, such as Bermuda and St. Augustine, that means fertilizing from late spring through the. Cool-season grasses, such as Kentucky bluegrass and tall fescue, require fertilization in the spring, no applications during the heat of summer, and resuming applications in the fall. Be sure to follow the recommended fertilizer spreader settings on the bag.

2. Water properly. If you look behind you and see footprints in your grass, it's time to water. Most lawns need a total of about one to two inches of water per week in mid-summer. Usually this is broken up into two or three applications, watering the soil to a depth of six to eight inches each time. Be sure to water early in the morning to avoid lawn diseases.

3. Mow frequently. Set your mower at the proper height for your type of lawn grass. Mow the lawn when the grass reaches one-third higher than the recommended mowing height. Cut it too low and you'll weaken the lawn, inviting weeds to take over.

Bayer Advanced Lawn has now made it easier than ever to build a better lawn. Bayer Advanced Lawn Triple Action fertilizers are special because they feed your lawn at every level. The product not only continuously feeds the grass for a thicker, greener lawn, it also builds stronger root systems. Plus it enriches and fortifies your soil with extra nutrition for a deep-down green lawn that lasts. And if you need to control weeds, Bayer Advanced Lawn Triple Action Fertilizer Plus Weed Control helps you control weeds at the same time you feed at every level. It contains a proven weed killer for lawns that controls more than 200 broadleaf weeds, including dandelion and clover, without harming the lawn. –Lance Walheim

Land Survey: What's Yours Is Yours

A land survey locates upon the ground, the land that your deed describes. For most people, the purchase of a home or other real estate property represents the largest single investment of a lifetime. A casual inspection of your property will not be sufficient to determine its boundaries and assure that all buildings, fences and other improvements on your land as well as that of your neighbors are properly located.

There are many questions that you should ask before you purchase land. The most important are:

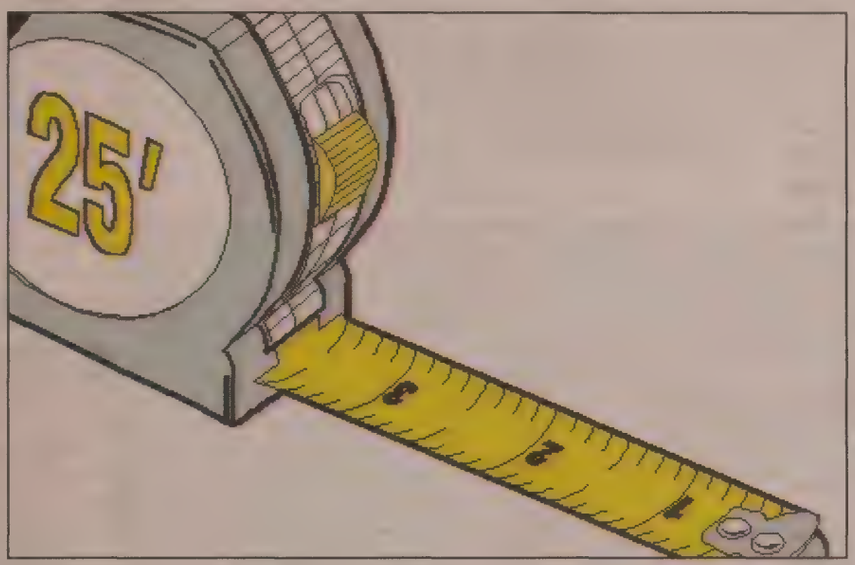
1.Exactly where are the physica boundaries of the property that I have contracted to purchase?

2. Are the physical improvements (house, garage, fences, etc.) that was shown, actually on the property?

The answers to these questions can be reassuring or distressing, but if they are discovered after closing the sale, the results may be a financial disaster.

Why are these questions important? They are important because the property described in a contract often is not exactly as it was shown or appeared to the purchaser. Sometimes property that has been improved and maintained by a seller actually belongs to a neighbor. The property lines may go through a garden, a garage, or even a house. Occasionally, a contract describes completely different land than was shown to the purchaser.

Who can answer these questions? Only a professional land surveyor legally licensed and registered to practice land surveying may provide the service necessary to answer these vital questions. A licensed professional land surveyor is an expert at interpreting descriptions of property and is uniquely qualified to accurately and precisely locate property lines.



A title search will insure that the seller owns the property that he has contracted to sell.

The services of an attorney will, among other things, assure an understanding of the survey and other documents necessary to the transaction, as well as of the obligations incurred by signing a given document.

What will a professional land surveyor do to answer these questions? The surveyor will study the documents that you supply, including those in your title search. Then a field survey will be conducted searching for and obtaining evidence of property boundaries and locating any visible improvements on or near the property. When the field survey is complete, the measurements are mathematically proven and the documents compared with the evidence found. After the surveyor determines the exact locations, a report is prepared, usually in the form of a survey map.

It may show that the garden you admired actually belongs to a neighbor or that others are using a part of the land. It may show you that the easement, reserved for others in the deed, is just the place where you thought your pool might go someday. It is also possible that there will be evidence of an easement that was not recorded.

With the survey map, your attorney can determine whether or not property conforms to the local zoning requirements. A survey will aid him in evaluating the effect of any covenants and/or restrictions on the property.

What if the seller has a previous survey? First, it will certainly aid your surveyor in his background research.

Second, a previous survey may not accurately depict current conditions.

Third, a survey done for a previous owner was done for a specific purpose and is not transferable to subsequent purchasers.

What will the survey cost? The costs of surveys differ because of varying sizes and locations of properties. Such things as the complexity of the descriptions, terrain and the shape of the property are factors, which must be considered. As a result, only a professional land surveyor can accurately estimate the cost of a survey.

The cost of a survey can range from a few hundred to several thousands of dollars. However, most professional land surveyors are willing to discuss their fees and offer an estimate before you authorize a survey. You should keep in mind that the cost of a survey represents a very small percentage of your total investment, but it can help you avoid costly and painful problems in the future.

Where can I find a qualified professional land surveyor? A professional surveyor who has been licensed and registered to practice in the state must perform all land surveys in New York.

Surveyors, who are members of Nassau Suffolk Civil Civil Engineers, Inc. Are all licensed and registered to practice in New York State. In addition, they have subscribed to the Code of Practice for Land Surveys adopted by the New York State Association of Professional Land Surveyors, Inc. This code is designed to help maintain a high standard of care and precision in the preparation of land surveys.

You should inquire whether the surveyor you are considering will certify that his survey has been prepared in accordance with this code and whether he is a member of Nassau-Suffolk Civil Engineers, Inc. You can find members listed in the classified section of your telephone directory under "Surveyors, Land."

Protect your interest. The professional land surveyor locates the property upon which improvements are planned and constructed. His professional services will cost less in time, worry and expense than the cost of moving a building, replacing improvements or defending a law suit in court due to a land boundary controversy. Retain a licensed professional land survey prior to the investment of funds as a protection of your interests. – Robert A.Smith

Time To Break Out The Brushes: 10 Quick Tips

There are few household projects that can be accomplished as quickly, cheaply and easily as painting touchups. There are also few household projects that can make such a mess. But by heeding the advice below, a new coat of paint on those high-visibility spots around the house could be enough to forgo a paint job for another summer. For modest jobs, don't be afraid to breakout the brushes and start slinging paint.

1. Figure out exactly what you want to paint and whether or not painting in one spot will require painting in another spot. To paint one area of trim and not the neighboring area can result in a funny patchwork-looking finish. Figure out exactly how much you'll have to paint, where you'll start and where you'll finish. Innumerable paint jobs have begun with a few railings and spiraled into an entire summer of painting.

2. Drop clothes are your best friend. For small jobs, the plastic tarps you can get at the paint store for two or three dollars will suffice. Be careful with these though: they rip easily and any paint dripped on them doesn't dry, so it is easy to step in and track around the house. For bigger jobs it's worth investing in a couple of big drop clothes. Look for ones with a canvas or cloth top and a rubber backing so that drips dry and won't bleed through. Newspapers are a big no no because any drips can bleed through them – as drop clothes they're about as useful as yesterday's news.

3. Preparation: Getting the surface area to be painted ready is 90% of the job. Skimp on the prep work and you'll be doing the same job next spring.

4. Washing: Any area should be washed before beginning. If the area is mildewed use some bleach, a scrub brush and a hose to clean it. The bleach will kill the mold and mildew and very little is needed. Let the area thoroughly dry; if there is bare wood wait at least 1 to 2 days before painting.

5. Scraping and Sanding: Get your drop clothes down and break out the scraper. Remove all loose paint and then give the entire area a good sanding. This is especially important on any surface that has a glossy finish. Without sanding a glossy finish won't hold paint. Fine sandpaper is best for this type of sanding. Finally, wipe the area thoroughly before apply any paint.

6. Priming: If there is any bare wood, it needs to be primed. A good primer and stain sealer is key to a long lasting paint job and should be allowed to dry for at least a day before painting. If you're painting a dark finish coat don't use white primer and vive versa, because you'll need multiple coats of finish paint to prevent streaking. The paint store can tint primers to aid in coverage.

7. Paint: Choose a high-quality paint. Cheap paint is like cheap wine (you don't want to drink

Perennials, How Are You Supposed To Choose?

Let's start with the sun and consider care. Modern gardeners demand low maintenance. Since many perennials require very specific conditions, these requirements shorten the list considerably. I have selected some low-maintenance requirements shorten the list considerably. I have selected some low-maintenance perennials that can provide a full season of shifting textures and colors. These are perennials that have stood the test of time.

Let's move through the season according to what's in bloom. Because blooming times vary from place to place, year to year, and variety to variety, the sequence may vary in your garden.

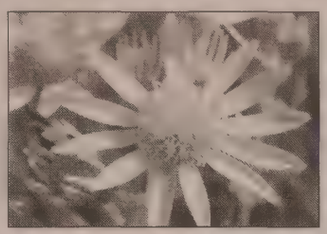
Iris is my first choice. Iris' need full sun. While plants may survive in light shade, they will flower less or not at all. The soil must be well drained; wet soils promote bacterial soft rot, a disease that causes rhizomes to decay, producing a foul odor when broken.

Iris should be planted about an inch deep and eighteen inches apart. Lift and divide them about every four seasons in July or August. Because they come in so many colors, they are a natural to scatter among other flowers with similar colors that can continue the color scheme after the iris flowers have faded.

Peony gets my vote as the most outstanding herbaceous perennial. The flowers are gorgeous and foliage remains attractive all season. Peonies don't ask for much, but location is important. They grow best in full sun and rich, well-drained soil. Root divisions should be planted in August or early September. The reddish buds on the tuberous roots should be set about an inch below the surface of the soil.

In a mixed border, peonies may be planted two feet apart. It takes about three years for roots to become fully established and begin flowering. Once established, plants may remain in place for fifteenth twenty years with division.

Oriental Poppy is not as well suited for all locations. Still, its large flowers of pink, orange, red or white makes it one of the most dramatic perennials in the garden. Once they are established they should be left undisturbed for many years.



Because Oriental poppies tolerate light shade, plant them where they get morning and early afternoon sun, but are shaded from intense heat. The plants need plenty of moisture in spring and through flowering; then dry soil after flowering, during dormancy, and in winter. Therefore, drainage must be perfect. If they die in a few years, it's probably because they were planted in poorly drained soil that remains too wet in winter. Given the right location and drainage, the Oriental poppy is pest-free. Space your plants about fifteen inches apart. In fall and winter when most of the perennial garden is dull, Oriental poppies produce small leaves that grow rapidly in early spring and disappear by mid-summer.

Daylillies are stalwarts of the perennial garden. Varieties have been developed that fill almost every need. Planted near early-spring flowering perennials or spring-flowering bulbs, their foliage will fill spaces after these plants die down.

Daylillies flower best in full sun, but can take light shade. Spacing depends on the variety; most need at least two feet between them.

Rose mallow is undoubtedly one of the most spectacular and easy perennials white, pink, rose or crimson flowers may be from five to six inches in diameter. Once established, this hibiscus grows larger each year reaching a height of four to five feet. Dwarf varieties are also available.

It is outstanding in wet soils, although it tolerates drier conditions. Because it becomes a large plant, almost as wide as tall, it should be used in the background. It is essentially pest-free. Roots should be planted in spring about three inches below the soil surface. Space plants about three feet apart.

Butterfly weed thrives in dry locations. It is spectacular as a single specimen, but may also be used in groupings. It grows about two feet tall. The flowers are usually a clear bright orange, however red, light orange and yellow types have been developed. Set plants out in spring or fall as young seedlings. Once established, plants are best left undisturbed. Soils that remain fairly dry and have a low fertility are most suitable.

Of course there are others I might have chosen. There are garden phlox, blanket flower, asters, yarrow, penstemon, delphinium, liatris, perennial sweet pea and many other favorites. But you have to start somewhere, and this list is intended only to get you going. As you begin to grow and work with perennials, you'll find it easier to select new ones and add to the list.

ABOUT GARDENING.....with Annette

NOT AGAIN!! SNOW!

It happened! What we all never wanted or counted on in the spring has happened. Snow! Those poor little daffodils and crocuses, who have just recently poked their heads up are now covered in snow. Yesterday, in anticipation of just this, I was out there scrambling around for empty pots suitable to cover the budding perennials. They are going to get cold but there is no use exposing the delicate leaves and buds to snow and ice. A cover will be all the protection they need for a few days.

When the snow clears up, it may be wise to get your pre-emergence fertilizer down also. I use a chemical free organic one from Gardens Alive. I only need to spread it twice a year, in the fall and in the spring, although last year, I did add an extra application to help the grass out with the terrible drought going on. There is no need to worry about burnt grass with this product either. It is a corn-based fertilizer and is safe to have your lunch on minutes after applying. This is great if you have little ones or even animals. The one I find that works best for me is the WOW! Plus (WOW=WithOut Weeds) of the line. Nip those darn dandelions and onions a.s.a.p.! Also takes care of the wreckless clover. You grass will be looking like a lush carpet in no time. I get the 50 lb. 2,500 to 5,000 ft. bag for sufficient coverage, comes to around $49.95. They also sell a smaller bag, 25 lbs. covering 1,250 to 2,500 for $28.95. Their website is at www.gardensalive.com. Wonderful product.

Remember, if you put your fertilizer down now, you must wait about six weeks before you plant your grass seed. The fertilizer will take a guess you have weeds coming up and just attack them! So the earlier you get it down, the faster you can put down your seed to beat the heat of the summer, giving it plenty of time to germinate and get started.

Pansies will do great in this weather now, so you can start to set them out around your mailbox or containers to add color to a landscape trying to come alive. Those little "faces" are so adorable! They make nice Easter gifts for a change other than the typical lily, tulips or other bulbs. Some of the newer colors are stunning. Check out your local grower for the best selections now.

It's also time to get into the potting shed or garage and check all your pots to make sure they are cleaned and ready to go soon. Start to stock up on a good potting soil and vermiculite as well. This way when you are on the road, you can stop at a nursery and pick up what you want and have a home waiting for it. Clay pots are so much friendlier to your plants than the plastic ones. And when they age and collect salts on the outside, it makes a real natural sight. They breathe and retain water and food whereas plastic just doesn't.

Getting Kids Into The Garden

Kids love playing in the dirt. A garden is pretty much dirt with a bunch of vegetables planted in it. It should then follow that kids would love to help in the garden. However, this isn't always the case. Kids often see time spent in the garden as a chore rather than fun. The key to getting kids to help out in the garden is to make the chores into games and before you know it, your kids will be digging, weeding and helping out.

The biggest problem kids face when they undertake tasks in the garden is the amount of time that it takes to accomplish things. By breaking down long chores into easily digested blocks of time kids will be more willing to help out. Try not to spend more than 15 minutes doing any one task. And any time there is an opportunity, make the task into a game and time will fly by.

Weeding is one of the most tedious and important tasks that goes on in the garden. It's also an opportunity to make mistakes and pullout plants rather than weeds, so keep a close eye on the kids while they're weeding. Instruct them to look carefully at the other plants around them. Do the plants have different leaves? Are the leaves arranged differently? Once the kids have an idea about what's a weed and what's not, try having a contest and see who can pullout the most weeds in ten minutes.

When fertilizing the garden it's always best to go with organic fertilizers like bagged manure (which is pasteurized to kill bacteria and weed seeds), compost or fish emulsion. This can be a tough job so leave the kids with the light work. Let them spread the fertilizer while you deposit it around the garden and remember to always water before fertilizing so you don't burn the plants' roots.

The name alone is enough to get kids interested: deadheading. Like weeding, an over enthusiastic deadheader can do more damage than good, so carefully instruct kids how to cut the dead flower just below the node. By explaining to them the purpose of deadheading (you're saving the plant from wasting energy on producing seeds and allowing it to grow more flowers) they'll enjoy the activity and helping the plant become even more beautiful.

Just like kids like to get under the covers and go to sleep, plants like to have their roots covered with mulch. By explaining this to kids they'll be happy to lay the mulch carefully around the plants and help prevent the growth of weeds.

Watering the garden will probably one of the kids' favorite tasks in the garden. Kids love hoses almost as much as they love dirt, so show them how to water and they'll have an absolute blast. First show the kids how to test whether or not an area needs to be watered by sticking their finger in the soil to determine if there is moisture present below the surface. If there isn't, show them how much to water and where, being careful of delicate blooms and leaves. After a few practice runs it shouldn't be too hard to get the kids out and watering on their own whenever the garden needs it.

By taking the time to get your kids interested in gardening you'll find that they love to help out and they'll be proud of their accomplishment when the fruits of their labors hit the table. You just might even get them to eat broccoli.

either) and life is too short to spend repainting. If you're using custom colors make sure you have enough paint. Between two batches of custom paint the colors can differ slightly and leave you with a multi-colored paint job; mix the cans together in a 5-gallon bucket before you begin. Also make sure your wife has approved the color as the paint store won't except returns on custom mixes.

8. Brushes: A painter is only as good as his brushes. Though expensive, a good brush is worth the investment and if properly cared for, it will last for years. The right size for the job is essential and for most jobs the best option is an angled sash brush. This will allow you to get in tighter spots and make sharper edge cuts. Also, when dipping the brush in paint, don't dip in too far and do not wipe the brush on the edge of the can to remove excess paint. This merely messes up the bristles, creates drips and removes too much paint from the brush. Instead, dip the brush a half inch into the paint and then gently, but rapidly, slap it against the sides of the bucket. The affect is like that of a pendulum in a grandfather clock. This will remove excess paint, but leave enough paint in the brush to create a thick finish. When finished, thoroughly clean the brush and hang it with the bristles down.

9. Finishing: Always paint with the grain of the wood. Remember, when using glossy paints, don't stop in the middle of a long stretch and let the paint dry as this will make a mark between the point that you stopped and resumed. Between coats of glossy paint, give the area a quick sand to help the next coat stick.

10. Rags: Second only to the drop cloth, the rag is essential. Have a bunch. Don't be afraid to use them and throw them away before they become too gooped up with paint. It's very important that you don't bundle up rags that have paint thinner on them. I once started a fire in a garage when some thinner-soaked rags spontaneously combusted. This will put a damper on your day and, come to think of it, it may just be a better idea to forget painting a go to the beach –Joshua May

Solving The Contractor Conundrum

There's a new baby on the way, the in-laws have blocked out the month of July to come visit and you're ready to find some personal space. While having a mid-life crisis and buying a motorcycle might seem like a good idea, it may be easier in the long run to just call a contractor and get the addition underway. Before you do this, however, there are some important things to keep in mind. How do you find a contractor? Will they be reputable and get the work done quickly and well? It's a big decision and a big investment, so check-out the advice below before moving forward.

How do you find a contractor? Ask around. Ask your friends, ask your neighbors, ask a building inspector, ask the people at the coffee shop down the street. Open the phone book and browse. Look at the ads in this paper and in our classified section. Get a list together and go from there.

How do you narrow down the list? Call them up and start asking questions. Find out if they will take on a project of your size, if they can refer you to previous customers, how many projects they have going at the same time, how long have they worked with their subcontractors and in your area. Once you know the answers to some of these questions you'll be able to narrow the search.

What do you do next? Choose 5 or 6 contractors to meet with and get estimates from. They should be able to answer all of your questions and you should be comfortable with them because you are about to have a very intimate relationship. Call the Better Business Bureau and make sure that they don't have numerous complaints against them.

How do you find out more about them? Call up past clients and ask to see their work. Find out how well they worked with the customer and remember that the contractor will refer you to people who were pleased with the work that they did. Better still, visit a job site that is currently underway and note the cleanliness, respect for the owner's property and the demeanor of the workers on the job.

With a short list in hand, how do I narrow the choices? A contractor will want two things at this point: blueprints and an idea about how much you want to spend. Compare the bids and ask the contractors to breakdown their estimates by materials (which should be about 40 percent of the bid), labor, profit (which should be around 15 to 20 percent of the bid) and additional expenses.

How do you devise a payment schedule? Generally, 10 percent of the total bid will be paid up front, there will be three 25 percent payments over the course of the job and a 10 percent payment when everything is finished to your satisfaction. A contractor looking for more up front may be in financial trouble, or concerned that you won't be satisfied with the work when it's finished.

Who should you choose? Money should not be the guide to who you choose. Get rid of the lowest bid. Then decide who you are most comfortable with.

And the final step is? The contract. This will include the payment schedule, start and completion dates, the list of materials and products to be used, lien releases so that the subcontractors can't sue you, proof of insurance and workers comp, and any additional stipulations.

Now it's time to sign a contract and test drive motorcycles. –J.M

What To Do When Termites "Spring" Into Action

As warm weather approaches, familiar sights and sounds signal the onset of spring-blossoming flowers, chirping birds and balmy afternoons among them. But another sure sign of spring's arrival-termites-may go unnoticed by millions of Americans who could be affected.

During the winter months, the 13 or more subterranean termite colonies that inhabit the average acre of American soil reproduce rapidly. How rapidly? The queen of each colony lays an egg every 15 seconds. By spring, the millions of eager offspring have sprouted wings and are ready to take flight. When they do, their job is to pair off and establish new colonies, too often in our homes.

Research shows that termites take a bite out of more American structures than fires and storms combined. According to Orkin Pest Control, termite damage costs two million homeowners a combined $2.5 billion a year in repairs. Because infestation is so common, typical homeowner's insurance policies do not cover termite damage.

"Spring is the time to be vigilant about protecting our homes from termites," says Orkin entomologist and noted termite expert Paul Hardy. "When termites swarm, our homes are more vulnerable than ever to infestation. Termite detection and prevention should be part of everyone's spring cleaning."

Because termite infestation can easily go unnoticed, the best way to identify an existing problem is to have a thorough home inspection by a pest control professional. Most national companies offer free termite inspections on request. Depending on the severity of the problem, visible signs of infestation include:

Pencil-sized mud tubes running across masonry from the ground to wood portions of the house;

Distorted or bubbled areas of paint on wood surfaces; and

Sagging wood structural elements, such as floor joists, beams or sills.

Homeowners can reduce their chances of termite damage by following these steps:

Look for excessive moisture in and around the home, and eliminate it. Basements, crawl spaces and spaces under sinks are common problem areas;

Trim siding or stucco at least six inches above the soil level;

Maintain clean gutters and downspouts;

Move firewood away from the house. Ideally, woodpiles should be off the ground as well;

Eliminate points of entry for termites by sealing cracks in the foundation or siding; and Consider a bait and monitoring system.

For more on termite prevention, information and tips are available at www.orkin.com. Free inspections also are available by calling 1-800-800-ORKIN

Police Blotter

East Hampton Police Officers and Fire fighters responded to the Springs School last Friday in reference to a fire alarm. Upon arrival, the departments found all the children shuffling outside into the rain, but no fire or emergency inside. Through further investigation it was discovered that a 14-year-old boy had pulled one of the alarms as a joke. The boy however didn't find the incident too amusing after being charged with Falsely Reporting an Incident in the first degree. The juvenile was processed and released to his parents.

A Gardners Avenue man became the victim of a dirty crime last week. He called police when he discovered his $1,100 dirt bike missing from his back yard. He told them he'd parked it outside of his shed but sometime between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Sunday, someone drove it away. The man's neighbors had no input to the investigation.

Some good ol' boys were up to no good at all out at the Farmhouse Restaurant last week. Responding to the restaurant's request for police presence, officers arrested two male subjects after they were positively identified as the pair that beat another bar patron. The rowdy couple was charged with 2nd degree physical harassment while the victim was photographed and treated for a few bumps and scratches.

Police nabbed a very, very bad boy in Amagansett last Friday night on Route 27. An officer was situated on the side of the highway checking speed in the 55 mph zone when he saw a vehicle with license plate "4BADBOYS" fly past at 74 mph. He pulled the vehicle over and found that the driver, a 28-year-old Farmingdale man, had two active suspensions in New York State. He was subsequently arrested and charged with aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

Another car's set of wheels has seized to move this past week, but this time the cause wasn't speed. Police arrested a 24-year-old Southampton man after he allegedly slashed all four tires on a car. He was charged with criminal mischief in the third degree.

The owner of an East Hampton boat yard called police last week to report vandalism that had occurred for the second time in a few days. Someone had entered the yard over night and removed a pair of supports that held up a large boat. The boat fell and suffered extensive damage to the engine and hull. Police have no suspects at this time.

NO SUV FOR ME
Dear Dan,

As I was waiting to pick up a pizza in Sag Harbor, I overheard a young lady say that she was selling her Explorer SUV. I wanted to thank her for getting rid of that gas-guzzler, until she said she was buying a Suburban. I picked up my pizza, got into my fuel-efficient Honda and drove home shaking my head in disbelief. Why would anyone want to trade up to a bigger gas-guzzler with the price of gas going up and a war being partially, if not mostly, fought over oil?

EVERYBODY LOVES A PARADE
Dear Dan,

We are very proud of the success of our 41st Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade and we hope everyone enjoyed it.

All of this would not be possible without the support of some very special people. We would like to express special thanks to Chief Todd Sarris, and the East Hampton Town Police, all East End Fire Departments and Police Departments, Chief Michael Mirras and the Montauk Fire Department, Ken Scott and the East Hampton Parks Department and Chris Russo and the East Hampton highway crews, The Montauk Chamber of Commerce and of course Dan's Papers.

Naturally, a big thank you to all the participants, the tens of thousands of spectators and our financial supporters. With their cooperation we were able to make this the best yet.

Our sincere thanks to all.

HISTORY, YOURSTORY, OURSTORY
Dear Dan,

With regard to your "debate" with Mr. Chris Whalen about Churchill, FDR and war, let me provide some factual information.

1. September 1: Germany invades Poland. Neville is Prime Minister of Great Britain. Britain declares war on Germany.
2. May 10: Chamberlain resigns from office – Winston Churchill becomes PM
3. December 7, 1941: Japan attacks the United States
4. December 8: Declares war on Japan (only)
5. December 11: Germany and Italy declare war on the United States

Always glad to help, but you still could look this stuff up.

FRENCH/FRANCH, FRANCE/FRENCE
Dear Dan,

I thought I would drop you a letter to clarify things regarding the unofficial boycott of French products in the United States.

If more Americans decide to boycott French imports and not spend their hard earned money traveling to France because the French have not supported our efforts to remove a sadistic, evil, murderous regime, I believe their economy will suffer a tremendous blow never experienced before. Last year some 2.9 million Americans visited France, this year that number is expected to be half. Ouch! Am I encouraging anyone to travel elsewhere? You bet! After all, many people living here lost their loved ones liberating France from the German war machine not too long ago.

Now, do I have to give up French fries, French toast, or French bread? Do I have to stop drinking my French roast coffee? Absolutely not! These items are prepared and sold by many local food businesses and restaurants and are not imported French products. The local business community should not bear the burden of the foolishness and forgetfulness of the French. Buy American, buy local!

Finally, I must state that I have personally drawn a line with the boycott. The one thing I simply refuse to give up and advise my fellow Americans not to give up is the French kiss. What would America be like without it?

Keith E. Davis
Golden Pear Cafes

I always thought that French Fries were made in Paris, then shipped to America one by one.–D.R.

Retails for $45 or visit www.nordstrom.com for a complete selection of Trish's makeup.

At Saks Fifth Avenue, you can pick up wonderful gift for you purchase of anything from Clinque for $35 or more. It includes a sleek Eyeglass case, Rinse-off Eye Makeup Solvent; Eyeshadow Trio in Perfect Couple and Whisper; Dramatically Different Moisturizing Lotion; Long Last Soft Shine Lipstick in Pink Spice; New Advanced Stop Signs; Moisture Surge Extra Thirsty Skin Relief; Long Pretty Lashes mascara in Black; and Quickliner for Eyes in Roast Coffee all tucked in a chic cosmetics bag. Also, another bonus, you can add to your Clinque gift, while supplies last, and receive a limited edition matching travel bag plus the gift above with any Clinque purchase of $50 or more.

Have you tried Maybelline's Ultra Wear Nail Polish? Pretty. Looks like there is crushed diamonds floating around. Claims it can stay on for 7 days without wearing at the tips or chipping. Somehow I don't trust nail polishes with that sort of claim, I think I may put a coat or two of Sally Hansen's Clear No Chip Top Coat on for double assurance! You can pick it up at local drugstores who sell Maybelline and Sally Hansen Products.

Magnify your lashes to the Max with Estee Lauder's new MagnaScopic Maximum Volume Mascara. An exclusive to Lauder, Expandex technology expands lashes up to 300% thicker and coats them in a supercharger color. The Speed Meter brush hugs every curve of your lash. Comes in black, brown, blue or purple. Sounds like just the mascara for spring! Retails at $20. Purchase at Bloomingdales, Macys and Nordstroms.

In spite of this week's snow, think Spring!

For More Information on Delgard Aluminum Fence
Please Call 631-732-7429

Thank you for considering our company for your fencing needs. I would like to tell you about Consumer Fence, as well as educate you about our industry. There are some key points you need to be made aware of as you are in the process of making a large investment. There are many options and styles for you to choose from. That is why it is so important to ask questions and to know the product. In the outline to follow you will learn what it is you need to look for when deciding on a fence.

1. Knowledge of the Product

You should know exactly what you are receiving as far as quality and material components. As you know, P.V.C. has become the most popular fencing product. The plastic division of our company has continually increased 30% each year for the last three years. Research the type of vinyl being used. We fabricate (build on our premises) "virgin vinyl" or "mono extruded." This is true vinyl in its purest form. It is the strongest, will hold up to the elements better and should not discolor. On the other hand, others use "co extruded vinyl" which can be recycled materials on the inside and virgin only on the outer layer. This is a cheaper route for other companies to take. The construction of all the privacy panels include a 2" x 8" bottom rail. This prevents sagging at the bottom of your fence, obviously a very important detail to ask about. The gate , whether you choose one or two remains the most important element of your fence. We build our gates on a 5' x 5' frame. The gates are thick and rigid. This creates a solid and sturdy beginning for the years of use to come. Inside the frame of our gate are sockets which hold the gate together. We then hang the gates on stainless steel hardware, which holds up the best compared to all other materials.

2. Workmanship

Your job will be done with the finest precision and knowledge in the industry. The installers working for Consumer Fence in all three locations are professionals who have been with us for over 12 years. Fencing is a seasonal business, and I have made a commitment to keep all of my employees in their job for all twelve months of the year. Here at Consumer Fence we are proud of our 92% employee retention rate. Most companies lay their staff off at the end of the season. This usually causes what I like to call "company jumping." When this occurs, the customer winds up with an inexperienced , unprofessional crew to install their fence. The end result being a very unpleasant, frustrating experience.

From Consumer Fence as well as Homeland Vinyl Products, Inc., you will receive a lifetime and transferable warranty. That speaks for itself. Virgin vinyl - the only product to use.

3. Pricing

We believe your price quote is also an important detail in your decision. Many consumers wonder why there can be such drastic differences in price between companies. There are a few different reasons why:

A. Material being purchased in bulk, lowering costs.
B. The quality of the grade you are purchasing
(ie: #1 cedar / spruce or #2 cedar / spruce, virgin vinyl or recycled vinyl)

These are the ploys many companies use, especially if you are not knowledgeable in these areas.

Consumer Fence is a family business dedicated to you, the consumer. We have over 18 years of experience and it is important to us that you feel comfortable from the first phone call to the end result. We believe that our commitment to fabricate and install the best P.V.C., wood and chain link systems will leave our customers very satisfied.
